Growth, Strength:
The University

From the Outside . . .

The campus pond reflects lights strung along Ellis Drive for Senior Week.

THE University must be a strange place to those outside. There is a constant busy-ness throughout the normally accepted school year from September to June, but the pace seems leisurely to those not involved in the process of learning. To one not trained at a university, the movement must be as inexplicable as the swarming of bees at the hive, the swirling of snow into a drift or the scudding of clouds to a thunderhead: Movements in confusion to a recognizable end.

Here, the recognizable end is the baccalaureate gained as the fruition of the four-year pace of seemingly confused movement, including curricula and non-curricula. The pace may be sometimes leisurely, sometimes frenetic, sometimes rhapsodic. Sometimes there isn't enough time, and sometimes there's too much time. But within four years there will surely be all sorts of times, including good and bad.

The following looks at nearly a year of that time.

. . . A Strange Place

Nightfall Redirects Studies

BY nightfall activity in classrooms has ceased for most buildings.

So students move on to dormitory rooms, Goodell Library, departmental libraries—anywhere studying can be done in earnest.

GOODELL Library receives the brunt of evening study action as the pace continues.

Yet, a basketball game at the Cage is likely to out-draw Goodell's offerings, as students try to achieve all experiences in a four year career.

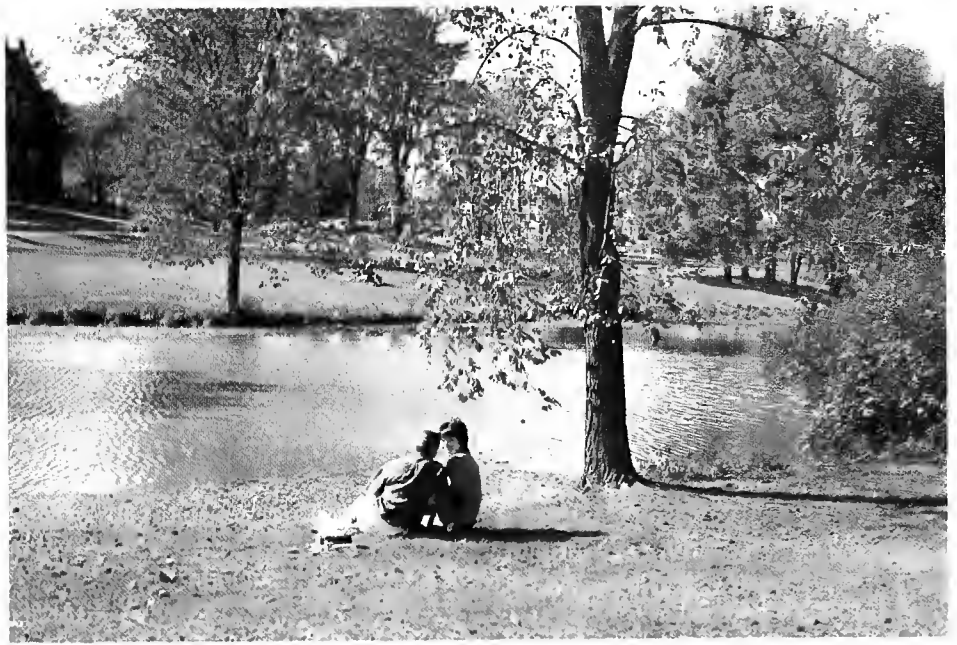

A Slackened Pace Leads to Leisure and the Pond

RURAL hints remain that the University once was agriculturally oriented. The pond, at the bottom of the natural bowl ringed by man-made brick and steel mammoths, offers a place for leisurely moments when a person can afford to lie quietly and soak sun.

Here, a couple can talk undisturbed, or relax unabashed. Spring and Autumn come to life here when the crocuses sprout and the leaves turn yellow and red. At the pond the pace slows down, languishes, but never stops: it's a refreshing pause.

A Change In The Weather, Scenery

A change of weather, a change of scenery, and the press is on full swing. By the first snowfall, finals are in sight. What remains to be done in the way of studies is under attack.

The relaxing pause finds its locale shifted indoors, usually the Student Union. The vernal setting becomes smokey, semi-obscured, raucous to a juke box tune.

And the grind goes on through all seasons until the goal is reached.

To and from classes the rush continues,
The pace quickens as time grows shorter

On the lawn behind Brooks in the lull before finals, coeds develop a tan.

Campus Springtime

SUNSHINE comes into each life, say the sages, and students get their share on the spacious lawns of campus. Springtime is the nicest time, when the lush verdure of the Valley swells in its most pregnant beauty.

Studies become an outdoor activity, as individuals and whole classes find the shade of the elms and the moist green carpet a soothing aid to the pursuit of academic excellence.

Students gather between classes on the south side of the Student Union.

Viewed in Warmth

In the shade of the Union patio studying comes easily.

Rains Changed Complexion

THE campus awash is little different from the campus high and dry, but for the mud low and wet.

Brilliant sun given away to gray rain denudes the campus of ornamentation, save for yellow slickers, sorority sailor caps and assorted goofy lids to keep hairdos more or less in place during brief runs between classes.

Brightens With Apparel

Umbrellas Open To Full View . . .

. . . Limiting What Is Before

ON the strictly functional side of rain wear, umbrellas take a stand.

That is, the umbrella is enjoying a UMass renaissance, since the days of Neville Chamberlain, that has been known before only in Harvard Square.

This undercover movement was formerly held alien to the less urbane University.

But the almost pastoral
Belies the theme of progressive change.

A University crowd gathers at Harvard Stadium for an early Autumn match.

Academic Pressures

AT some point in Fall's early warmth, when spirit has yet to be drained by examinations, and the football season is still comfortable for the fan in shirt sleeves, the social venting of as yet undeveloped pressure begins.

This is accepted, generally speaking, by one and all, both student and faculty on the basis of a belief that something special, exciting or relaxing, ought to be included in that academic scheme of things.

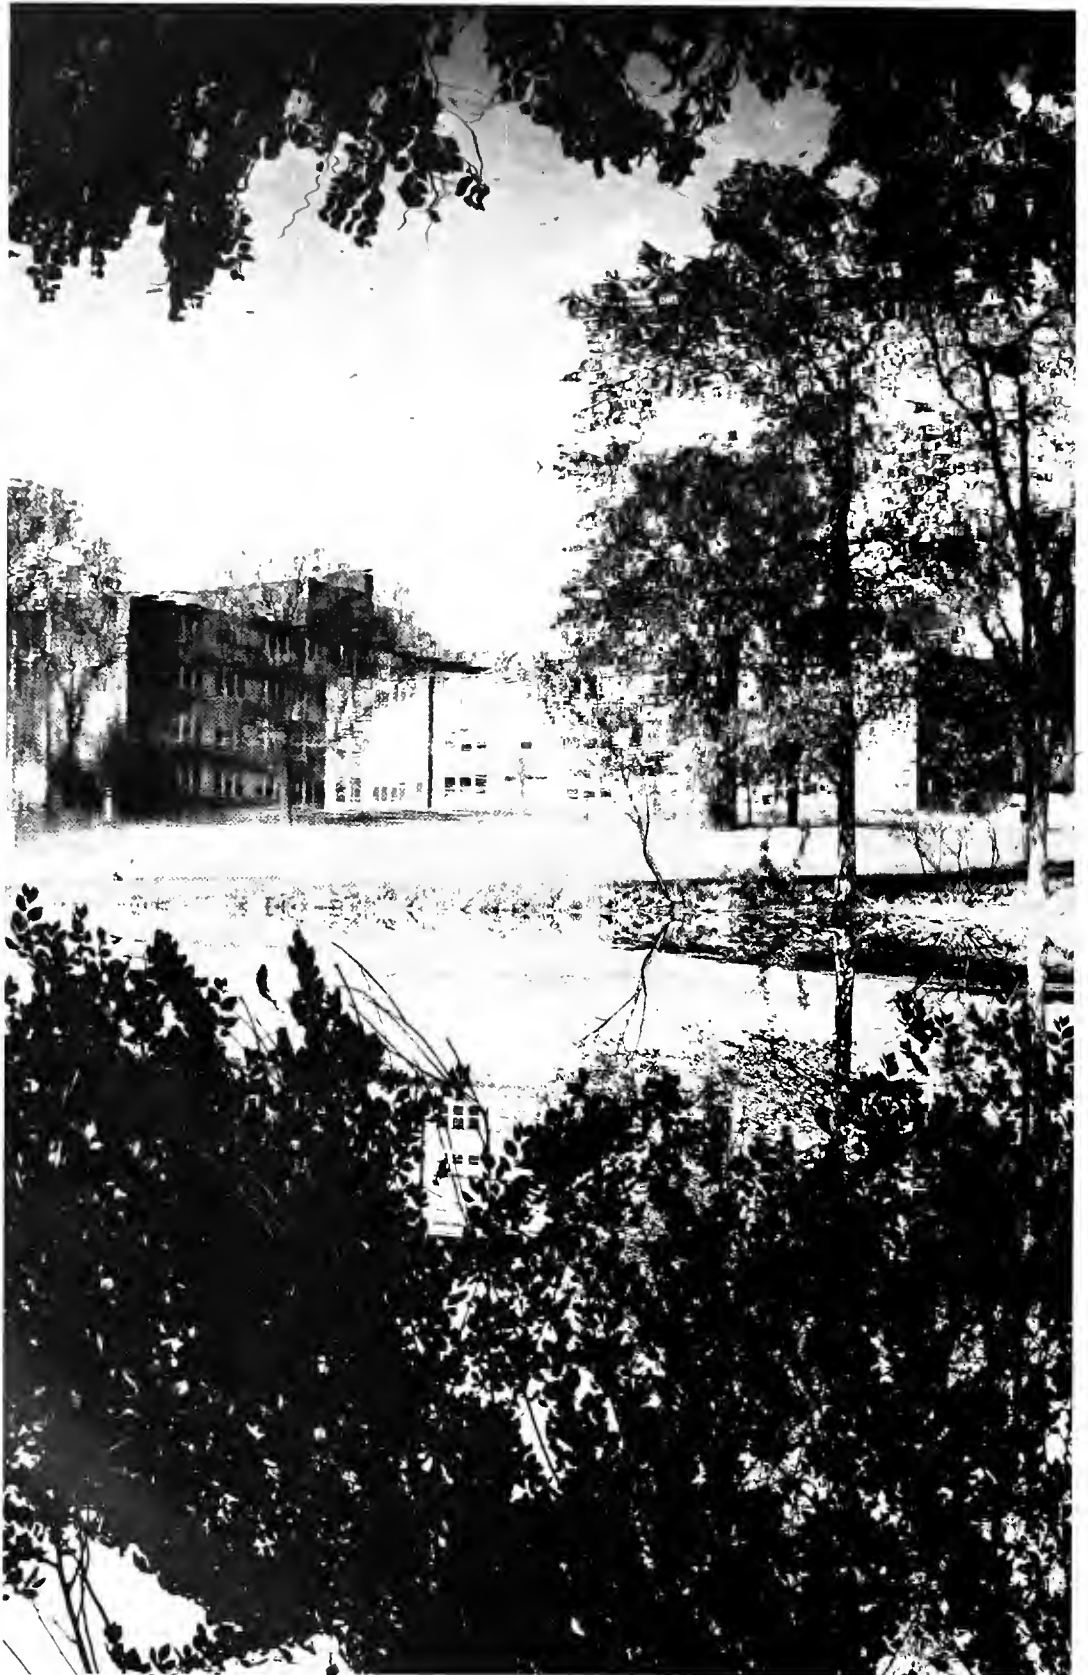

Fast Paced Hoopla Is Part Of Fun- The Non-Curricula

IN the scheme of things academic falls that which is non-academic, or non-curricula. Practically unheard of a hundred years or so ago, this diversionary channel moves the would-be overflow of academic exuberance to safe floor basins: Athletic fields, student publications and government.

And possibly-misdirected energy is well spent.

Justin S. Morill Science Center reflected in Campus Pond.

Ivy Covered Walls Get No Support Here

FROM football season to football season, a natural beauty pervades the campus, lending an ivy-covered-wall affect that could be called a false front, since ivy-covered-wall-ism is not traditional at the University.

There is little traditional at the University at the present time. Whether growth provides a poor soil for the rooting of tradition, or unseen forces continually sabotage the attempts, the University can be "traditionally" described as one of great natural beauty and few traditions.

Memorial Hall through a Bartlett Hall window.

Sagging Tradition Keeps Watch On Movement

TRADITION: That's what Metawampe, Old Chapel and South College smack of. They stand still watching, used for whatever use can be got out of them. Chapel went from what its name signifies, to Old Chapel (vacated four years ago by the English department at the completion of Bartlett Hall), to the Music department's haven, pending construction of a fine arts building.

South College houses the administration and IBM, which will move when the new administration building is completed. And Metawampe stands by, not sure any longer of his function.

Movement Produces Viable Traditions

IN the past fifteen years a new tradition has made its mark at the University: holes in the ground and derricks in the air.

Unlike Metawampe, Chapel and South College, this tradition seems inexhaustible—in fact, meaningful—in the face of University growth.

The Frenetic Pace of Building

SKELETAL frames of what-will-be seemingly sprout from the ground. As if a huge harrowing machine were gouging furrows for enormous plants, holes sink into the ground literally overnight, as augmented work forces build the University's buildings of the future.

What the future will bring is a matter of speculation. And common sense dictates that the physical expansion will have to stop. But what can never cease to grow and expand is the intangible reason for a University's being at all.

Float Construction--Parade Harbinger

Greenough's float takes first place in the men's dormitory division.

INDIAN Summer's warmth and color served to heighten and brighten Homecoming 1963.

Brilliantly garbed marchers supplemented a gala float parade through Amherst Friday evening bearing a sole message: "Beat Rhode Island." Thousands of spectators lined to watch more than forty floats, representing weeks of preparation by fraternities, sororities, and dormitories.

Prize winners were: fraternities: Beta Kappa Phi, QTV, Phi Sigma Delta; sororities: Sigma Kappa, Kappa Kappa Gamma, Pi Beta Phi; Men's dorms: Greenough, Baker, Wheeler; and Women's dorms: Knowlton, Van Meter North, Johnson.

Blonde Sandy Pierce '67 was crowned Homecoming Queen at the following Rally-Without-a-Bonfire necessitated by a six-week drought. Members of the court included: Anne Creedon '66, Elaine Howe '66, Judy Sturtevant '67, and Vicki Lippner '67.

A record crowd of 12,000 students and alumni saw the undefeated Redmen, sparked by Milt Morin and Bernie Dallas, crush the R.I. Rams 57-0 Saturday afternoon.

UMASS' marching band ushered the Homecoming Queen and her court on to the field with a musical trip to the land of the Arabian Nights. The half time show also featured the Flying Redmen.

Game casualties that afternoon included cheerleaders who marked each new score with a push-up per point.

Saturday evening was highlighted by the Homecoming Dance in the SU ballroom. Other post-game offerings for undergraduates included the traditional fraternity parties and the University Theatre's production of Plautus' Twin Menaechmi at Bowker auditorium.

ALUMNI and faculty promenaded to the music of the Bob Jeffway Quartet at a dance in Memorial Hall sponsored by the University Women. A Tailgate Picnic numbered among earlier alumni activities.

The Dave Brubeck Quartet of "Take Five" fame wrapped up the weekend's activities with a jazz concert sponsored by Alpha Phi Omega, national men's service fraternity.

Over 2500 people crowded the Cage to hear progressive jazz. Proceeds went to the Art Acquisition Fund earmarked to furnish a gallery in the University's projected Fine Arts Center.

Cheerleaders were driven to physical limits: 57 pushups.

Squeeze Is On: Dorm Construction Misses Deadlines

UNFORESEEN difficulty in housing 5470 students this year developed when four dorms failed to meet completion schedules in September.

Until May, 1963, it was assumed the dorms being constructed on the hill north of campus would be ready for occupancy last fall, and applicants were accepted on that premise.

Students who would have occupied these dorms flooded present facilities. Result was that the campus' 26 dorms housed 845 students above normal capacity, and several hundred upperclassmen moved to off-campus quarters.

To help relieve crowding, 600 rooms in boys' dorms were converted into triples while threesomes of girls were squeezed into 245 regular size rooms. Less than 20 rooms on campus are designed as triples.

In addition, 139 single rooms were furnished to accommodate two.

Makeshift conditions were partially relieved in January when, as is always the case, more students left than arrived on campus.

While overcrowding may never be completely eliminated, continuous campus expansion will force dormitory construction to keep pace with the growth of the student body.

A familiar dorm scene on Saturday afternoons.

The all-important phone call.

Wash day—again.

RESPONSIBILITY for coordinating campus housing for 5470 students in September fell on the University's Housing Office, under the direction of Mr. John Welles.

As an administrative body, Housing is very closely connected with students.

Aiding him are Administrative Assistant Frank Thomas, Staff Assistant Bob Van Vliet, Men's and Women's Housing Officers and two Assistant Housing Officers.

Housing exists not only to put out brush fires, but as a planning agency for future facilities—planning as much as 20 years in advance by considering projected enrollment plans and academic facilities.

Plans for the future provide for a campus community centered around the pond, with dorm areas equidistant from the center. Automobiles will be pushed further and further away from the center of campus to periphery areas.

Don't forget to sign out, girls.

Students' wives enjoy a "hen" session.

The family budget must be carefully planned each week.

Family life is planned for studying.

Books and Brooms and Babies--

The Double Life of Married Students

SEVEN hundred and thirty-five members of the campus community lead a double life.

Daily the occupants of the married students' dorms combine books and brain-work with dusting, dish-washing, and diapering.

Typical of the student family are Mr. and Mrs. Dick Buck and their three children.

As a student and family man, Dick, a senior government major, like most husbands doesn't help with domestic chores in order to devote more time to studies and a part-time job.

Though life is dictated by financial restrictions, the low rent in married dorms helps make schooling a reality for some students who couldn't otherwise afford it.

Pleasure for the Bucks consists in relaxation from studies and chores, usually concerts or football games with an occasional movie. Rare nights out are made possible by swap babysitting among the ten families on the floor.

More frequent are the evening get-togethers in one apartment while special occasions are celebrated with corridor parties and dancing in the halls.

Although separated from the mainstream of UMass life, married couples still feel themselves a part of the campus because they live so close and can take advantage of cultural and entertaining programs.

The inevitable in every home.

Off Campus Living Affords New Facets For Many

FOR the first time in many years, off-campus housing is being enjoyed by a considerable group of undergraduate male students. Suspiciously regarded only a few years ago, off-campus housing is something of a blessing to harried administrators.

Most students find it pleasurable to have more than one room. Planning meals, shopping and cooking cram an already busy schedule, but the challenge is felt to be worth it.

Usually chores are assigned according to one's class-hour schedule, thus allowing for all to participate in the housework.

As some students observe: "It's certainly homeier than a dormitory and not as strictly run as a fraternity. You're more on your own."

Says Jeff Eisman: "I find it more comfortable here."

"These things just keep piling up," says Paul Levy, "but we've got it set up so all of us get a chance."

"We eat pretty well," offers George Masselam (left), "but the budget can present problems."

University Theatre's Roman Holiday:

Masked Ken Feinberg as the Parasite awaits his entrance cue.

A ROISTEROUS Roman comedy called Twin Menaechmi bounded onto the Bowker stage to open University Theatre's second season as the University's academic theatre.

Second century Rome would have roared guffaws of recognition at the production. Masks made by part-time student Kathy Wrynn added authenticity and gaiety to twentieth century puns dubbed in for audience identification.

Jim Wrynn, Kathy Wrynn's husband; Larry Wilker, Paula Norton and Deena Ferrigno headed up a talented cast, which produced a fine play and added even more color to Homecoming Weekend.

Slipping out of celastic masks and into Victorian garb, the UT's, aided by Roister Doisters, brought UMass the record-breaking Ghosts.

IBSEN'S penetrating social drama was borne onstage by a cast of five, headed by Sheila Ferrini as the tragic Mrs. Alving.

Spring semester, UT followed up with Shakespeare's Othello and Robert Penn Warren's All The King's Men, besides sponsoring a University Reading Theatre production of a new play by a young American playwright.

Not only actors, but stage crews—knee deep in sawdust and up to elbows in paint—worked on shows, whether for academic credit, points toward RD membership or sheer fun.

It's hurry up and wait for chow.

AMONG the introductions are the lines: registration line, book store line, ID line, Hatch line, Commons' line, and others.

With 6800 students enrolled, the succession of one upon another in quest of a common goal is bound to result in long lines.

However, the physical plant continues to grow, thus affording the possibility of cut-down lines. Meanwhile, human nature will retain a certain hatred for lines, and undergraduates will question the value of the wait for Commons' food.

But the problem of lines at the University of Massachusetts may yet refute a Euclidian axiom about a straight line being the shortest route between two points.

Finally they reach the goal, one at a time.

Buffy Returns; Candy Sales Boost Funds

A SPEECH by the former President of the United Nations General Assembly, a concert by a UMass graduate and a panel discussion highlighted U.N. Week activities, October 20-26.

Sir Muhammed Zafrulla Khan's address, "United Nations at the Crossroads," outlined the growth and change of the U.N. to an audience of 1200 in the Student Union Ballroom.

A panel discussion of "Aid to the Agrarian Community" featured UM faculty members Dr. Luther Allen, Dr. David Leonard and Dr. Bruce Morris.

Folk song-stylist Buffy Ste-Marie who has given several concerts on the UMass campus, returned for U.N. Week.

An International Dance and a dorm candy sale completed the agenda.

Profits from U.N. Week went to aid for underdeveloped countries.

Members of the "cast" stare in disbelief as the six characters tell their story.

Memory Of Being -- Search For Being

TENSELY probing and tragically enigmatic was Luigi Pirandello's Six Characters in Search of an Author, presented to an enthusiastic UMass audience of 1200 by the Circle in the Square off-Broadway company.

The October presentation was the first Distinguished Visitor's Program offering of the year.

A slapstick rehearsal of eight actors and their director is interrupted by a family of six agonized characters, who hang in a horrible existence and cannot die. Cries the father—"It's unjust that our whole existence is based on one fleeting moment of eternity." They have a past with a story, but no existence; they beg the director to write their play and their lives.

He agrees, and he has his actors play out the story as the characters tell him it has been. "One person cannot get into another," cries one of the characters in anguish as he sees the play of his life.

Their lives cannot be performed, their story cannot be written—the characters vanish, the actors leave, wonderingly.

DVP's Shirer Drops "Third Reich Secrets" For World Situation

WILLIAM L. Shirer, DVP's November offering, put aside the "Problems of the Third Reich" to speak a series of pronouncements on the world situation.

"No free democratic country in Western Europe would stand for a reunification of Germany, for a united Germany would become the strongest power in Europe," said Shirer.

But he conceded that within the next hundred years Germany would adjust to the Democratic process.

"Russian development in technology and education poses a threat to us" Shirer told the 1600 in the Student Union ballroom. To serve the overflow crowd, the Union's public address system piped the voice of the man who authored The Rise and Fall of the Third Reich and Berlin Diary into various lounges in the building.

Shirer stressed the need for U.S.—Soviet understanding in the face of the nuclear potential possessed by the two powers.

Shirer cautioned, "Red China can no longer be swept under the bed," and lauded foreign aid as a tangible form of U.S. generosity.

Said Shirer, looking back, "I think we can say we've not had a bad record."

Moving to the Cape Cod lounge, William L. Shirer answered questions from the audience in a give and take session. Over 1600 heard the former Chicago Tribune foreign correspondent.

Smothers Brothers In S. U. Sponsored Show

HALF the student body was at home and the "Cage," traditional home for campus concerts, was closed for repairs, but the Smother's Brothers were a hit anyway.

The November 10 concert coincided with the Veteran's Day weekend, but 1700 students jammed the Union Ballroom and countless more enjoyed the concert with a cup of coffee as the program was piped into the "Hatch."

Since their introduction to television audiences on the Jack Paar Show the Brothers have been entertaining people across the country through records, night spots, and the college concert field.

Tom and Dick Smothers create their act by combining genuine wit with just-as-genuine musical talent. Straight-faced Dick kept the program moving, but the seemingly naive stage appearance of Tom captivated the audience.

"If you heard their constant stage bickering, could you doubt they were brothers?", as some students observed.

Rallies Few--Bonfires Fewer

BAD weather, long weekends and a sure-thing football team put the damper on Fall rallies.

First drought, then down-pour, ruled out bonfires and the final rally.

By mid-season the Red-men seemed to need no pre-game boost to trample the opposition.

At one point, to overcome the weather, an indoor rally was attempted. Cheerleaders, band and football team turned out as usual, but attendance failed to be impressive.

The Maroon Keys were saved from a shutout when good weather allowed construction of the first (and as it turned out, the last) bonfire of the season.

2400 Donuts Get Dunked Into 3000 Cups of Coffee by 6500 Persons

SEVENTEEN hours a day, seven days a week the Hatch caters to the coffee, companionship, and conversation needs of students.

The Hatch is the real center of campus life where students meet the gang between classes, snag weekend dates, discuss the assignment for the class they're cutting, and sometimes even type term papers.

Its casual atmosphere also attracts professors who take a rest from lecturing or correct the blue books they've promised to return the next period. Even the administration sends Dean of Students William Field as the special ambassador to the Hatch.

Hatch weekend meals provide a welcome relief from Dining Commons diet. Chicken dinners and hamburgs and french fries top the list of campus favorites. While waiting in the (seemingly) endless line, students make new acquaintances and enjoy the sweet music of the Beatles.

According to Assistant Manager, Mr. A. C. Fontaine, the Hatch serves over 500 meals a day with Monday and Thursday nights the busiest dinner nights.

Over 24,000 donuts get dunked into 3000 cups of coffee by 6500 persons who often overflow the 567 customer seating capacity.

The average student spends about ten hours a week there while the addicted Hatch rat takes an occasional break to attend classes.

POOR Mr. Webster would probably roll over in his grave if he could see what connotation has done to his English language.

Take the word Union and ask any University student what it means. The Union . . . it's a place to buy. A place to buy coffee, papers, books, laundry soap, contemporary cards, and one way bus tickets in those discouraging moments.

It's a place to relax or just kill time in the bowling alley, the pool room, the reading lounge, or the music room. It's the place of the Friday night dance, the Pep Rally, or the bigger social events like Mili Ball.

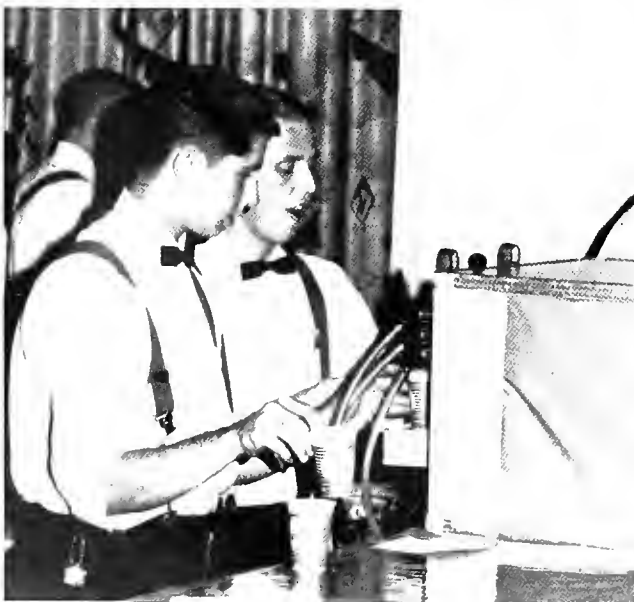

It's also a place to learn, in the study areas and at the lectures.

Further it's a place to produce, in the offices of the Collegian, the Index, the Senate and the numerous conference rooms.

Moneychangers, waitresses and cigarette girls in short skirts, husky bouncers, and friendly bartenders all lent atmosphere to the Club. Authentic backdrops from Las Vegas and a floor show from New York added professionalism to the scene.

S.U. Programming Is The Backbone

SUCCESSFUL events seldom just happen. Behind the scenes of what may appear to be a casual, impromptu party lie the planning and skill of a competent host.

Likewise behind the casual facade of the Student Union, the "university's living room," lie a number of competent hosts and hostesses.

Thursday night movies, Friday night dances, Sophomore Banquets, and art shows occur as regularly as clock work, but they don't just happen.

In keeping with University tradition the students plan the events, but the real hosts and hostess of the Union fill their positions on a forty-hour-a-week basis.

Anything that takes place on the campus that does not concern academic life is handled by Mr. Scott, Mr. Buck, Mr. Watts or Miss Alden through their offices on the Union mezzanine.

Concert Assn. Offers Musical Opportunities

LIKE most "campus schools" the University is geographically alienated from the large cities of the state. Thus it is not possible for the students to take advantage of Symphony Hall and the Metropolitan Opera with any degree of convenience.

Due largely to the efforts of the Concert Association the University students are able to enjoy professional productions right on the campus.

The first production of the '63 season, an English translation of Puccini's Tosca, was presented in the Cage, as are all large scale productions. On September 30, however, the floor was still under repair and the audience found chairs set up on dirt rather than the usual hardwood basketball court.

Luckily, earlier productions in the series were small enough to be performed in Bartlett Auditorium, and by the time the Toronto Symphony arrived, the Cage floor had been completed.

The 1963-64 season featured the Schola Cantorum, Netherlands String Quartet, Toronto Symphony Orchestra, Raymond Hansor and Leonard Seeber, New York Brass Quintet, Robert Joffrey Ballet and Greenwich Quartet.

Assassination Strikes Campus Emotional Blow

TWENTY-SIX days earlier he stood in the midst of students from both the University and Amherst College where he broke ground for the Robert Frost Memorial Library.

When word of the death of President John Fitzgerald Kennedy struck campus, all motion ceased and the wait began. Amid confused reports from Texas, young, high hopes rose and fell. Students wept unashamedly, and the University went into formal mourning.

All activities, social and academic, were suspended. And almost immediately, the student body left for a suddenly lengthened Thanksgiving holiday. Then followed the days of the state funeral, sharply interrupted on a Sunday by a second irrational act, the televised murder of the suspected assassin, Lee Harvey Oswald.

Only once before had the President been to the University, and that, in 1956, as a candidate for the United States Senate. But likely, a part of him will always remain, whether in the name of the new athletic stadium or in the fact that he lived when he lived, as he lived.

At Amherst, too, he walked amongst the people.

The flag of the United States was immediately lowered to half staff when his death became known. The facade of Memorial Hall bearing the names of battles of two world wars and the names of men who died in battle, serves as an appropriate background.

The Twenty-second Of November

Grief, consternation, disbelief crossed the faces of students who gathered in the Student Union ballroom to wait and listen with the rest of the nation for final word.

A new elective has been added to the University curriculum—Reserve Officers Training Corps.

This announcement brought about a series of changes in the previously mandatory system.

As had been expected, the total enrollment of the program dropped by nearly one half.

For the 938 men who elected to take the ROTC program two new innovations were added. One academic credit was given to the previously creditless course. Also added was the Army Flight Program which trains and qualifies selected seniors for their pilot's license.

Innovations also brought University women into the realm of the program when the Army assumed sponsorship of the Precisionettes while the Air Force introduced the Angel Flight.

The campus at large benefited by the change when Dickinson Hall was opened for academic classrooms.

Traditional Warmth of Continues Despite

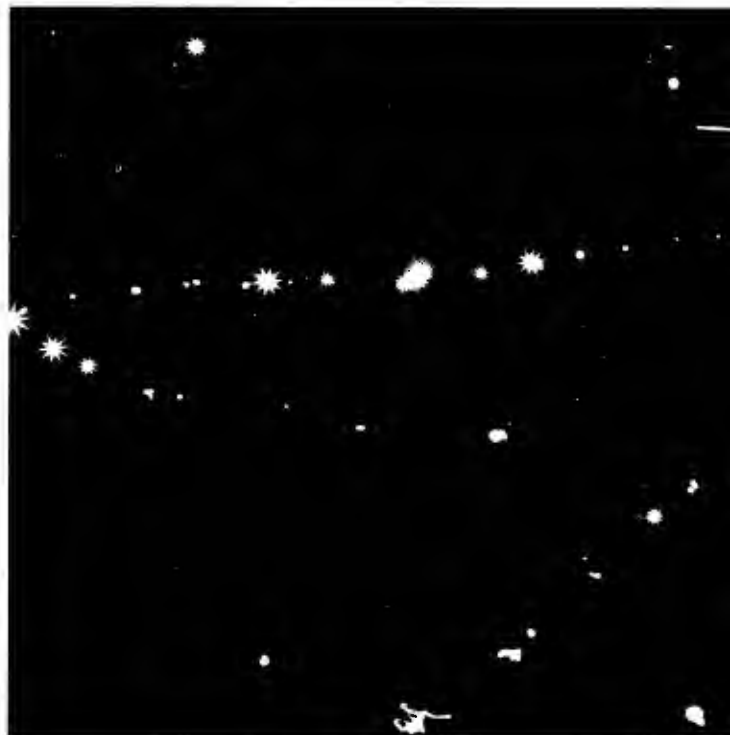

FADS come and go and so do some "traditions," but the Holiday Season at the University will always be the Holiday Season.

It's really not too different from the celebrations that we have in our own homes, but by virtue of the size of the University family, everything is big.

We'll always have the Trim-a-Limb Party in the Union, the Carol Sing, and Christmas Concerts. Mail boxes will continue to overflow with season's greeting, candles will appear in residence hall windows, and Christmas trees will appear everywhere, including over new construction sights. The men will loosen up their vocal chords to serenade the women's residences, organizations will give parties for themselves and for children, and religious services will be held.

Chanukah will always have its traditional supper and program of religious readings and song. And Israeli dancing will continue to follow the program.

It's nothing new or novel. It's old fashioned tradition. But, who wants it any other way?

However, the students, the overflow of people making up the audience, were not complaining. Thomas's impressive lecture, sponsored by the Political Science Association, was received enthusiastically by the capacity crowd, including those seatless victims who were content to line the back walls of the Student Union Ballroom.

Thomas aroused the student body with his strong plea for a revision of foreign policy. Stressing the transformation that has taken place on the world scene since World War II, he stated, "In the old days there was only one uncle, Uncle Sam, and he could spank the boys when they got out of hand. Today there are two uncles," he added, "there is also Uncle Nikita." Mr. Thomas advocated, in shaping our foreign policy, a steady drive towards disarmament, aid to emerging nations, and disengagement from military commitments.

Weather Foils Winter Carnival Plans

Marty Brockway Reigns Over Weekend

SNOW was a problem. First because there wasn't any, then because there was too much.

Only a scant two inches covered the Pioneer Valley for days before Winter Carnival Weekend, and through early Saturday evening, not a crystal had fallen.

Snow sculptures were necessarily ruled out. Outdoor events were seriously curtailed, including an elaborate program of sleigh rides and dog-sled matches. But the scheduled fireworks flashed brilliantly Friday evening as the Winter Carnival Ball, highlight of the weekend, got under way in the Student Union ballroom. The Lester Lanin orchestra provided music.

Queen Marty Brockway, a petite sophomore received the crown of her office from the hands of Governor Endicott Peabody, who in turn honored the regal lady with a gubernatorial kiss. Four more lovely ladies, Anne Creedon, Pam Chace, Roxanne Giles and Diane Klein, assisted Queen Marty as members of her court.

Governor Peabody also got the chance to meet with the Commonwealth's four most famous TV personalities of the day, the UMass College Bowl team of Captain Bill Landis, Mike Berrini, Dave Mathieson and Susan Tracy.

Carni theme that was to be represented in snow sculptures built by fraternities, sororities and dormitories was "All the World's a Stage" from Shakespeare's Mid-Summer Night's Dream in honor of the 400th anniversary of the poet's birth.

Traditionally the junior class' most impressive production, Winter Carnival suffered at the whim of the elements. But the Class of '65 kept up with plans left unaffected by the weather in a valiant attempt to provide Winter Carnival entertainment.

In the true tradition of the stage "the show went on" despite the lack of snow and a fickleness on the part of nature that no other Winter Carnival has had to overcome.

Women's Dorms Down Sororities 3-0 In Hard Fought Powder Puff Game

CAME Saturday afternoon and the Powder Puff hockey game faced off on the ice of the Campus Pond. A women's dormitory team bested a sorority squad 3-0 to take the games honors.

But the hockey game missed by an ice chip from becoming another casualty that weekend. Until a few days before the match, the pond was dry while workmen constructed a small flood control dam at the northern end of the pond.

Once the dam was completed, the pond was flooded and the question became one of whether the water would freeze. By Saturday an ice cover capable of supporting the combined weight of the Powder Puff teams was on the pond.

So the girls took to it with brooms and a soccer ball to play an approximation of the Canadian national game. What the teams lacked in ability was made up in comedy.

Fashion, As You Like It, Modeled For The Well-Dressed College Miss

A fashion show, featuring University coeds as models, demonstrated the weekend wardrobe of the well dressed campus woman during the later part of Saturday afternoon.

Sportswear made the greatest hit as a brilliant array of ski parkas, ski pants and other togs for the skiing miss were modeled at Bowker auditorium.

Formal evening dress, casual knits for daytime and a host of accessories were displayed for the campus miss.

An added attraction to the fashion show was the appearance of the Winter Carnival Queen and her court dressed in Elizabethan period clothing to heighten the marked contrast with contemporary styles and to keep pace with the weekend's Shakespearean theme, "As You Like It."

Then Came The Snow . . .

PARTY-GOERS returning late Saturday evening were the first to notice the long-looked-for, but at present unwanted snow.

The unexpected coastal storm left its mark and weekend visitors faced the prospect of being marooned in Amherst. The bonfire, scheduled to be lighted in the afternoon to start final festivities that included the concert appearance of the New Christy Minstrels, flared briefly and died.

The bonfire that never fired.

Some found it necessary to leave early.

That Wasn't Really Needed

SNOW enough for any Winter Carnival nearly forced an abrupt cessation to the festivities by delaying the featured concert performers, The New Christy Minstrels.

A quick decision on the part of Carnival authorities allowed the troupe to set down in New York, then continue by bus to the University.

Again, the show went on, six hours later than scheduled, before 4000 stalwarts in the Cage.

Eat, Drink, Merriment: Amherst's Provender

One of Amherst's finest in the traffic box at the confluence of Amity, Main and North Pleasant Streets on a busy Saturday afternoon.

EAT, drink, and be merry," call out Amherst stores offering students everything from books to bottles, pipes to pizza.

Saturday afternoons are spent buying supplies for the week and checking stores for sales and the latest campus fashions.

Amherst grocery stores are invaded by students stocking up on canned foods, soups, crackers, coffee, and sweets. Rolls, salami, pickles, and cheese are purchased for portable picnics during the warm season.

Lower town prices draw student housekeepers to the domestic counters where they buy soap powder, shampoo, shaving cream, toothpaste and kleenex.

Everyman's form of transportation was somewhat restricted by the Selectmen.

Intellectual, Somatic Broadening Are As Close As Downtown

With the boom in off-campus living, UMass students searched for bargains.

Quick lunch ingredients, such as salami, cheese and baloney top the list.

THE more intellectual and cultured student rushes to the town bookstore for his copy of Fanny Hill and then to the record shop for the latest Beatles album.

On the Saturday before big campus weekends, the UMass coed shops for a new outfit in the two houses of fashion while her date orders a corsage in the flower shop.

Odds, ends, and jiffy hooks are picked up in the town's only five and ten.

UMass males crowd to the smoke-shop to buy cigarettes and view the latest in pipes.

A group of students can fill a market basket as quickly as a housewife.

Eli's "Whiffenpoof" At Home In Amherst

Relaxation on a Saturday evening in the spirited manner of "good friends, tried and true."

Pained expression: Big Line.

DURING the week students socialize at the Drake in hopes of winning a weekend date. Shy males lose their inhibitions after a bit of socializing and take the plunge, but forget to appear by the following Saturday night. Early Saturday evenings, couples stroll into town heading for supper at the pizza houses or ice cream parlors. Onion rings, grinders, garlic bread, spaghetti, hamburgs, french fries and cokes supplement Dining Commons fare.

Doris Kleinerman, Bobby Jaye, Mary Anderson and Andy Olanoff enjoy dinner by candlelight.

Amherst's Isolation Can't Escape Hollywood

MEANWHILE lines are beginning to form for the 9 p.m. showing at the movie theater. In the dim interior couples munch popcorn, hold hands, and verbally express their approval or disapproval of the showing.

The movie over, couples race to beat the crowds to the ice cream shops to warm up with a cup of coffee, enjoy a sundae, or talk over a cigarette.

Don Grant and Sue Tracy take an evening's ease from study to view Hollywood's more or less recent offerings.

UMass Spurs Town's Services

ON the more homey side, Amherst merchants supply paint, prints and mops for the amateur interior decorator, as well as matching bed-spreads and curtains.

For those with a need to get to the bustling "downtown," which serves the needs of an artificially swollen population of 20,000, fulfillment is no problem.

Amherst's most prominent ice cream parlor serves the Saturday night theater crowd and Sunday morning church-goers.

Sport's Illustrated, Crime and Punishment, Fanny Hill, the town's smoke-shop offering is well diversified.

Six-Week Odyssey Brings Back College Bowl, $10,500 And Team

AT least six months before the first television appearance of the University's College Bowl team, preparations were underway to recruit and select team members.

Assistant professor of English Albert P. Madeira volunteered to act as coach and began the screening process.

Nearly 100 applicants went through the first round of written exams. By early Fall an alarm system of the type used on the nationwide show was being used in daily practice.

The team had been scheduled to make its first appearance November 26, but the College Bowl program was canceled with all other network programs at the death of President Kennedy. UMass was rescheduled to January 26.

To fill the unexpected void, Coach Madeira arranged radio appearances for the team on WTTT and WMUA and kept weekly practice rounds. However, on January 13, Mr. Madeira died suddenly of a heart attack while shoveling snow.

The team went on the air Sunday, the 26th, without a coach but assisted by University News Editor Dan Melley and Ray Castelpoggi of the Office of Institutional studies.

A predominantly UMass audience saw the team beat the University of Dayton 150 to 125 at the NBC Peacock studio. The Student Senate had subsidized buses to carry rooters back and forth to New York City.

The following week UMass smashed Rollins College 310 to 150, and Dave Mathieson came down with acute appendicitis. Following a week off while NBC programed a special, the team, including Mathieson, whipped Iowa State 285 to 140. Then fell St. John's of New York 245 to 150, and the finale, a crushing blow over the University of Arizona, 360 to 35.

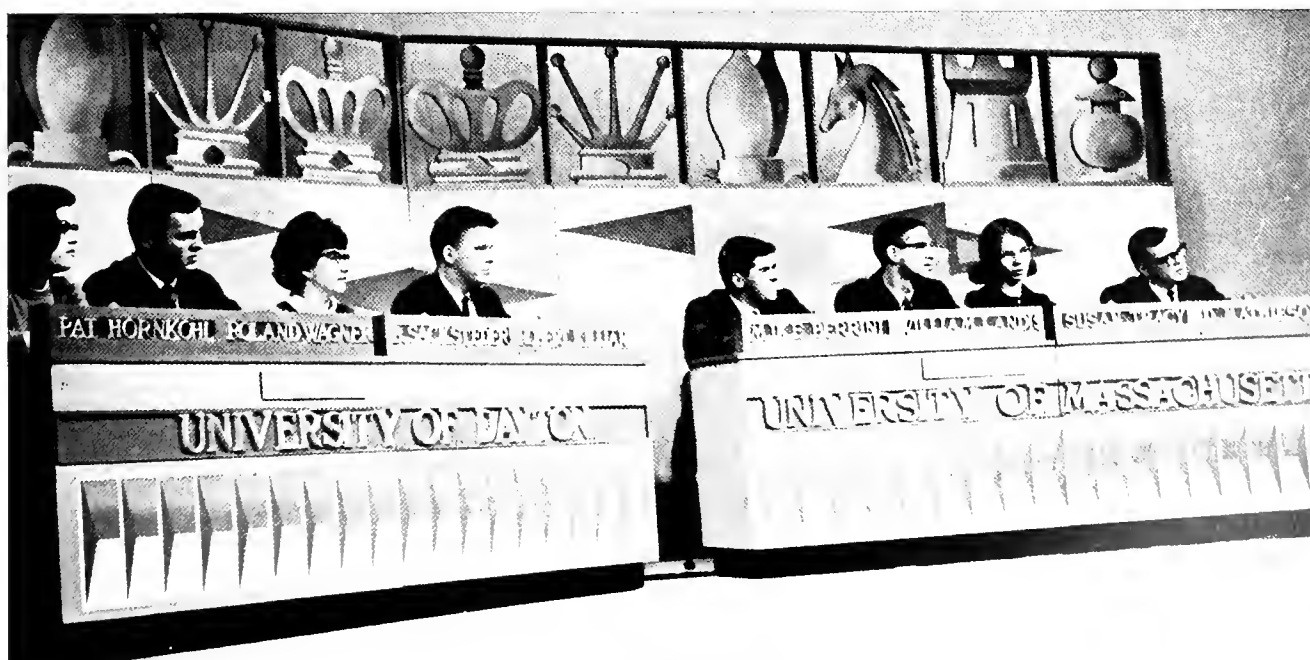

Returning to campus from New York with a State Police escort, the team was greeted by a clamoring throng of students, faculty and alumni. Later in the week they were received at a State House reception by Gov. Endicott Peabody and members of the Massachusetts General Court.

Combined Efforts Of Fine Arts Offers

Backstage with the Beinhorn Marionettes.

COOPERATION among ten campus organizations, under auspices of the University's Fine Arts Council, resulted this year in a 20 program Fine Arts Festival held from March 4 through March 25, dedicated to the memory of President John F. Kennedy.

In previous years, weekend long Festivals were held on campus, originally under sponsorship of Mortarboard. The extensiveness of this year's program was a University first, one enthusiastically received by the University community.

The Festival opened with a lecture by G. B. Harrison, noted Shakespearean scholar, in observance of the 400th anniversary of the birth of the great bard.

University Theatre contributed their production of Othello to the Festival.

A concert of electronic music by John Cage touched off a minor controversy in the campus community about the audaciously different "music" Cage had presented.

A unique musical workshop under direction of Dr. Elliott Schwartz presented works of composers from colleges and universities in the New England area.

A 45 voice choir from Union College in Kentucky appeared in concert, sponsored by the Wesley Foundation.

3-Week Festival To Late President

RENOWNED poets Robert Bly, Stephen Spender, and Robert Fitzgerald appeared on campus as part of a three-day Poetry Workshop, sponsored by the Distinguished Visitors Program.

The three visited classrooms during the day and delivered addresses and readings in the evenings.

The exciting contemporary style of the Robert Joffrey Ballet Company was enthusiastically applauded by an audience of close to 3000, in the University's Cage.

Four art exhibitions were an integral component of the Festival.

The well-known Beinhorn Marionettes, noted for mysterious black and light creations and varied programming, drew a large number of youngsters from the surrounding area as well as a campus audience.

Musical performances were also handed in by flamenco guitarist Ron Soedalter and by Evelyne and Bob Beers, who appeared in a concert using early American folk instruments.

The University Concert Band gave their Spring Concert as part of the Festival.

Milton Mayer, author of They Thought They Were Free, lectured under auspices of the English, government and history departments.

The 45 voice choir of Union College in Barbourville, Kentucky appeared in the Student Union Ballroom.

University's "Tribute Of The Arts"

High Point Of Festival

MAJOR event in an event laden Festival was the University's "Tribute of the Arts" to the late President John Kennedy. Featuring students and faculty as participants, the mid-day program drew an overflow audience of 1500 in the Student Union Ballroom.

Opening the solemn ceremonies, Frederick Ellert of the German department stressed the late President's commitment to the fine arts.

Several professors of the English department—Robert Tucker, G. Stanley Koehler and Joseph Lang-

Senior Edward O'Connor read one of Kennedy's favorite poems, "The Gift Outright" by Robert Frost.

A dance, choreographed by Miss Georgia Reid of the physical education department, was performed by Miss Reid and students Elaine Baxter and Catherine Noel.

Doris Abramson of the speech department read from Shakespeare's works; the UMass Concert Band performed "Memorial," composed for the occasion by Elliott Schwartz of the music department.

To The Advancement And Communication Of Knowledge

AN emphasis on the individual student . . .

A dedication to produce "men and women of substance on the greatest possible scale" . . .

A mission "to look upon learning not only as a means to bread and butter, but as a means to the knowledge by which we fulfill the best interests and highest aims of society."

—remarks by President
John Lederle at 1963
Opening Convocation.

Academic Life

A Teacher Affects Eternity; He Can

Dr. George Richason assisting freshman student in chemistry laboratory.

— Henry B. Adams

In an explicit manner, he lectures a class in introductory chemistry.

He helps students to understand difficult concepts.

OF all the hierarchy of Academe, it is the teacher who has the power, by wit of his own ability and intention, to most directly encourage or discourage the student's desire for education and the extent of that education.

As a tribute to his ability to teach, Associate Professor of Chemistry George M. Richason was chosen by his colleagues on the faculty to receive the second annual "Distinguished Teacher of the Year" award at the University's opening convocation in October.

A member of the UMass faculty since 1947, Prof. Richason graduated from the University in 1937, obtained his master's here, and did further work at Bowdoin College, Massachusetts Institute of Technology and Clark University.

He is also overseeing the $150,000 renovation of Goessmann Chemistry Laboratory under a National Science Foundation grant.

Dr. Clarence Shute, philosophy.

Pay Hike Puts University In National Running

PAY hikes at state universities do more than raise the faculty income.

National ratings showed that the UMass faculty pay raise this year put the University, at long last, on an equal footing with other universities in competing for the country's best teachers.

Besides granting a 10 per cent across-the-board pay hike to all state employees, the Massachusetts State Legislature authorized the Boards of Trustees of the state colleges and University to grant an additional increase not to exceed 10 percent of the total professional payroll.

As of February 1, the average salary for UMass faculty members was $9496, an increase of $1196 in the average over the November, 1962 average of $8300.

Of the additional 10 per cent hike, administered on a graded scale and passed by the Board of Trustees, every faculty member got at least two per cent.

Commenting on the merit increases, President Lederle said, "We were woefully behind the national average in salaries for teachers in the upper academic ranks. By concentrating our major adjustments in the upper ranks, we have become fully competitive with other universities in the country at all levels. This means we are better able to keep top faculty members and to attract more outstanding teachers . . ."

The hike meant, for example, that full professors, on a year-round basis, went from a minimum of $13,086 to a maximum of $16,822; full professors, on a ten-month basis, from a minimum of $11,773 to a maximum of $16,624.

Under state law, all professionals at UMass were placed on the State General Salary Schedule at the same time they received their pay raise.

Professor Shafer Williams, history.

UMass Professor -- Man of Many Faces

THE University faculty comes in a variety of shapes and sizes.

In origin, according to most advanced degree, the UMass faculty is 59% eastern, 25% midwestern, 3½% foreign, 5% western, and 7½% southern. About 30% come from Massachusetts.

Of the over 650 faculty members at the University, about half hold doctorates in a field of academic study.

The UMass academic community this past year held 288 doctor's degrees, 277 master's degrees, 83 bachelor's degrees, 7 first professional degrees.

Each of these 650 educators is something different to the people around him.

To some he is a researcher advancing the frontier of academic dogma; to some he is a publicist making a name for himself and, thus, for his institution; for some he is a lecturer transcribing the complex material of his field into an elemental outline for the undergraduate. At his apex he is a compromise.

Professor Lawrence Bartlett, zoology.

Four-College Cooperation In The Pioneer Valley

Joint Action Provides Variety Of

FOUR Colleges in the 10 mile radius of the Pioneer Valley interchange is one of many programs which endeavor to maintain the University as a "place of light, of liberty, and of learning."

The exchange course program among the academic neighbors of Amherst, Smith, Mount Holyoke and the University of Massachusetts offers advanced courses in a student's major which are not available at his home institution but which are vital to his complete education.

More than 300 undergraduates and graduates were involved in this program this past year. Since its inception in 1957, the program has grown rapidly, gaining the attention of the academic world.

Monthly meetings of joint committees from the four institutions discuss ideas, plans and problems. Co-ordinator is Stuart M. Stokes of Mount Holyoke College.

Augments Study In Major Fields For 300 Students

OF special importance to government majors at the University is the cooperative Asian-African studies program, which is financed by the Ford Foundation.

Primary purpose of the program is to pool resources and facilities in this specialized field of the four participating institutions.

A faculty interchange is also part of the program and many outside experts in individual programs come in for a semester.

Taking full advantage of inter-college inter-change is graduate student Henry Leavitt, a 1962 graduate of the University. He has been traveling the four college circuit since his junior year.

The challenge of solving the problems of such existence led him to choose government as his discipline and African studies as his minor.

Second semester of this year, for example, he enrolled in two seminar classes at Smith, which were primarily discussions among students and professors.

Last year he was the only student in a geography of West Africa course at Mt. Holyoke.

One of three University graduate students actively participating in the Asian-African studies program, he is at present working on his M.A. thesis on the Development of Neo-Destour of Tunisia.

Opportunity

AMONG programs available to the participants are: a joint astronomy program; the Massachusetts Review; a film center; a joint Ph.D. program; WFCR, an educational FM radio station; and the Hampshire Inter Library Center, housed at the University's Goodell library. This collection contains rarely used books which had been duplicated by the four colleges.

President John W. Lederle

Powers Lauds Lederle For Administrative Ability

TO the students at UMass, President John Lederle has often seemed a phantom figure.

But as the school's chief representative to the Commonwealth, and its elected administration, he's been a slamming success.

When Lederle arrived at UMass in 1960 from the University of Michigan, he had behind him vast educative and administrative experience.

Besides holding posts at Brown University and the University of Michigan, he was a practicing attorney, a public administrator, and has served as legislative consultant to the United States Congress.

Working for the University in the world of politics and appropriations, John Lederle has been a prime force in getting UMass fiscal autonomy, a new capital outlay program, and a faculty pay hike.

"From the legislative viewpoint," said Massachusetts Senate President John Powers, "very little of this would have been possible were it not for Dr. Lederle's recognition of the General Court's interests, rights and functions in this as in all state areas.

"We are truly appreciative of his understanding of our role, our problems and the relative importance of the University in the general scheme of things.

"He has truly initiated a new era..."

"A . . .

University Secretary Robert J. McCartney

Old Grad Returns As New Secretary

THE appointment of Robert McCartney as the University's new Secretary is like the proverbial sheep returning to the fold.

A 1941 graduate of UM, McCartney served here from 1948 to 1953 as University News Editor and from 1953 to 1956 as Director of Publications and News.

In addition to his duties as Secretary, McCartney will take on the responsibility of Director of University Relations, a post he has held at the University of Maryland for the past eight years.

In this position he will coordinate University communications in the areas of news, publications, radio and television.

Woodside Resigns As UMass Provost

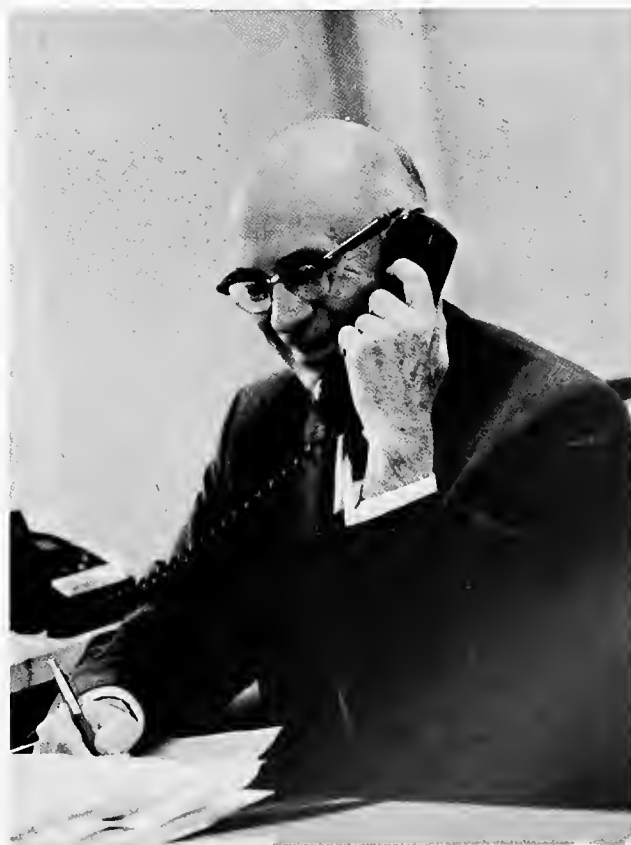

CONTINUAL flux and change in personnel seems to be a part of the life of any growing university—but it's always too bad when a good man leaves for greener pastures.

Former Provost Gilbert Woodside came to the University 27 years ago as an assistant professor of biology, was appointed Head of the Zoology Department in 1948.

He expanded offerings in zoology on both graduate and undergraduate levels and was instrumental in building a successful program of pre-medical studies.

He was named Dean of the Graduate School in 1950, became Acting Provost in January of 1961 and Provost in June. In this post, he served as the University's chief administrative officer for academic affairs.

Woodside left UMass this year to become Assistant to the Director for Scientific Program Planning and Development at the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development in Bethesda, Maryland.

Former University Provost Gilbert L. Woodside

Director of Institutional Studies, Leo Redfern.

Communication--Interaction: The University , . . .

UMASS' man with the figures is Dr. Leo Redfern, Director of the University's Office of Institutional Studies, a three-year-old storage bin for data on higher education in general and UMass in particular.

Aiming at greater excellence in University academic programming, OIS gathers and analyzes information—published or unpublished, about UMass' growth, development, management and operation—including Mass Reviews and salary analyses.

OIS came into being partly to aid the University's administration in its planning and plan-substantiating. A clearinghouse of information about UMass was made necessary by the higher level and greater quantity of decisions demanded of officials at a rapidly expanding state university.

"We're here," says Dr. Redfern, "to assist the University community to maintain standards in a period that demands increased services, to cooperate with similar services throughout the country, exchanging data with them."

The Office also encourages and undertakes publications dealing with institutional progress, plans and future projections.

LEARNING at UMass isn't confined to the enrolled student body and the University Coordinating Office is one reason why.

Under the direction of Mr. Harold Durgin, the six-year old office brings some 22,000 persons "back to school" yearly for participation in conferences of an educational nature.

The Office originated as a means of further serving community and Commonwealth.

Planned as far as four years in advance, the 125 conferences that meet at UMass yearly include labor leaders, school secretaries and government officials. Once it is decided to hold a conference on the UMass campus, meals, lodging, meeting rooms and times are arranged by the Office.

Though averaging about 250 persons, some groups range in the thousands, and one, the summer 1963 American Institute of Biological Sciences conference, brought over 5000 persons to the campus from all over the world.

Conference Co-ordinator, Harold Durgin.

. . . The Commonwealth And The Nation

WHEN a student makes the honor list or a senator visits the campus, people find out about it because of the University News Office. The News Office releases news items about the University to over 3000 outlets monthly—these include radio stations, newspapers, television stations.

The Office this year reorganized into a triad to allow for further expansion. The Office of University Publications is headed up by Bill Deminoff—former News Editor; News Editor, in charge of getting news of UM to the press, is Dan Melley; an office in charge of funnelling news to radio and television was headed early in the year by Woodridge Brown.

Lanphear Retires After 42 Years As

Registrar William Starkweather and Mrs. Marion Markwell.

Mrs. Polly Ball assists a student changing a course.

“THERE was one letter waiting to be answered when he arrived to take the post of Registrar in 1918,” a colleague of retired Registrar Marshall Lamphear said.

With well over 10,000 applications for admission to the University received this year, times have certainly changed.

A living legend to 16,000 alumni and 8,700 students, Lamphear retired this year after 42 years as University Registrar, under six different presidents.

Indicative as an individual of the forces that have made the University grow he has been cited as “the campus’s greatest wit”, a storehouse for progressive knowledge about the University, a man of tremendous integrity.

In his years as chief admissions officer, Lamphear has seen the University grow from Massachusetts Agricultural College with fewer than 500 students to the present UMass complex.

Despite the pell-mell of innovation in admissions procedure at the University, including computer handling of much of the statistical material, Lamphear was noted for his personal approach to selection, interviewing many applicants himself.

Which may be indicative that a personal element is ever necessary to excellence, no matter what the complexity of the institution.

Applications For Admission

Leap 47% Over 1963

AN astounding 47% increase in the number of applications received this year over 1963 is one reason why admissions administration has been expanded.

With the retirement of Marshall Lamphear as Registrar, Dr. William D. Tunis was named Dean of Admissions and William Starkweather took over duties as Registrar.

Breakdown of responsibilities formerly handled from one office, puts Tunis in charge of applicants up to their final acceptance and Starkweather in charge of students until graduation.

In the decade since 1954 the number of applications and acceptances at the University have tripled. Next year's freshman class will have 2600 members.

Placement And Growing Needs

Assistant Director of Placement and Financial Aid Services, David P. Lawrence.

WITH an undergraduate enrollment of 6800 as of September, 1963, the University Placement and Financial Aid Services finds itself keeping pace with everyone else.

Primary functions of the office are vocational and financial guidance, including granting of loans and scholarships, assignment of part-time on-campus work, handling military and draft affairs, arranging interviews for seniors with over 350 employers each year, keeping myriad records and having a fund of information available on graduate study, fellowships, assistantships and career work.

Some 817 undergraduates were awarded $280,000 in scholarships and $158,000 in loans through this office for the past school year.

In this year's freshman class alone, 270 students were awarded about $150,000 in loan and scholarship aid.

On the staff in the Machmer Hall office are Director Robert Morrissey, Assistant Director David Lawrence, Women's Placement Officer Edith Antunes and Men's Placement Officer George Emery.

Financial Aid Meets With Work-Scholarship

Sophomore pre-dent major, Andrew M. Hansen, here operates a drill press in Goessmann laboratory as part of his work-scholarship assignment.

AVAILABLE to upperclassmen, the new work-scholarship program allows students to perform in such categories of their major fields as: faculty, lab, and research assistants; department and library worker.

Any student with a 2.5 cumulative average in need of financial assistance is eligible to apply. The Placement and Financial Aid Services attempts to match skills with work to be performed. A stipend of $200 for one semester of work is offered to 100 students; while 200 places are available in the $400 program of one full academic year of work. Recipients are required to work an eight hour week.

The project not only provides monetary rewards, but also stimulates interest in a major field.

Currently, well over 300 undergraduates are participating.

Librarian Hugh Montgomery

A House
Of Cards;
Of Books
And Ideas

A repository of men's knowledge, to serve men must be as alive and vital as the University itself.

Goodell Library serves UMass with a permanent staff of 53, a student and part-time staff of 65 and stacks with 280,000 titles.

At the rate of 700 books daily, the library circulates about 203,000 books a year, exclusive of departmental circulation.

Reference, reserve, microfilm, duplicating, periodical services are among those available to the UMass community at Goodell.

Librarian Montgomery reports a new addition planned for after 1966 will be located west of the present building, will include study areas, stacks for 1½ million volumes and graduate, honors work and special project facilities.

With an increase in appropriation, he adds, a 100% increase will bring to 45,000 the number of books added yearly.

The card catalogue eases location of books.

Some 700 books daily pass over the circulation desk.

Juniors Robert Cabral, Suzanne Buker, Arnold Kaplan and Dave Mitchell are engaged in a discussion on Scientific Method and the Human Spirit. Directors of this group were Dr. Donald Fairbairn of the zoology department and Professor Paul Propicio of land architecture.

Professor Gerald Braunthal of the government department, directing a senior seminar.

BY offering a variety of thought and opinion for consumption, the University Honors Colloquia Program encourages independent thought by the student.

Instituted six years ago, the Colloquia operates as relaxed seminars, comprised of no more than a dozen students and two directors each. Grouped according to class, members are selected because of previous membership, nominated by an instructor, or chosen because of cumulative average. The students—this year there were a dozen seniors and 130 underclassmen—meet in their groups one evening a week for discussion of their topic.

Each group is heterogeneously arranged with regard to the students' field of study; the directors are instructors or administrators of different fields. This interdepartmental cooperation provides a maximum range of subjects.

Elana Yorke, Suzanne Gagne, Mr. Bernard Bussel of the math department and Allen Davis discuss individual values vs. society's values in a Freshman colloquia.

Honors Colloquia Stimulates Thinking Man

Professor Robert Tucker of the English department, directing a senior colloquia.

SEVERAL topics under debate this past year were: the status of America, with required readings including Brave New World and 1984; characteristics, trends, and values of contemporary society; philosophical considerations in higher education; and man in the next hundred years. Typical Junior Colloquia subjects were corruption in government; the American university; and human dilemmas in an age of science.

Challenging the intellect and providing opportunity for each student to speak up on and delve into abstract contemporary problems is the goal of the Honors Program.

Approximately 85% of the participants go on to graduate study.

Alpha Lambda Delta Aids Frosh

PERSONAL contact with freshmen women in the dorms, speeches given at frosh convocations, distribution of booklets on proper study habits, tutoring in various courses are among the many functions of Alpha Lambda Delta.

The national scholastic honor society for freshmen women, there are more than one hundred chapters of Alpha Lambda Delta throughout the country. Membership is open to those who received a 3.5 or better first semester, Freshman year, or have a 3.5 at the end of Freshman year.

Phi Tau Sigma Plans Scholarship

FOUNDED at the University, Phi Tau Sigma, a Food Technology Fraternity, strives to encourage the application of fundamental scientific principles to Food Science, to honor and recognize professional achievement in the field, and to promote fellowship, thereby stimulating free exchange of knowledge.

Future plans include expansion of a present scholarship program made possible by the contributions of industries and individuals, and a continuation of the program of speakers on aspects of Food Science.

Beta Gamma Sigma Boosts Business

BETA Gamma Sigma, the honor society for faculty and students in Business Administration, encourages and rewards scholarship and accomplishment in the field of business and promotes the advancement and spread of education in the science of business.

Since the society also attempts to foster principles of honesty and integrity in business practice, its members are selected on the basis of high moral character as well as high scholarship.

In the future, the society is looking towards increased activity with the opening of the new business building.

Tau Beta Pi Honors Engineers

ZETA Chapter of Tau Beta Pi, national honor society recognizing engineers, was established in 1956. It honors academic achievement and exemplary character of undergraduate engineering majors and promotes engineering as an academic field of interest.

Among its projects are: slide rule instruction for freshmen; high school visits to encourage students to pursue engineering; and a career panel in which guests from specialized areas of engineering speak with the students.

First Row: Horstmann, Recording Secretary; Foster, Vice President; Most, President; Heselton, Corresponding Secretary; Konsevich, Cataloger. Second Row: Gyrbko, Beck, Damiano, Bodendorf, Allen, Wade. Pi Sigma Alpha New Honorary

IN May, 1963, the Delta Lambda Chapter of Pi Sigma Alpha, the national Political Science Honor Fraternity was formed.

Its purpose is to honor students showing scholastic excellence in political science, and to encourage further study in the field. Members are chosen in the fall and spring of the academic year.

Presently, the society has aimed to benefit the campus community by stimulating interest in the political sciences.

Future activities will include tutoring in this field, speakers, and a series of student-faculty forums dealing with problems of political science.

Phi Eta Sigma Sponsors Tutoring

MEMBERS of the present sophomore class who have attained an accumulative average of 3.5 in their freshman year are eligible for Phi Eta Sigma.

As a national honor fraternity, the local chapter, established in 1955, serves to encourage a high standard of achievement among freshmen in addition to recognizing outstanding scholarship by freshmen men.

Their activities include sponsoring freshman tutoring and assisting in the DVP programs.

The members plan a scholarship aid program to be initiated in the spring.

Xi Sigma Pi Hails Achievement

THE main objective of Xi Sigma Pi, national forestry honor fraternity, is to maintain high scholarship standards in forestry education, to recognize academic achievement, and to promote fellowship among majors.

Selected from the top one-fourth of their class, it also includes graduate students and faculty.

The local chapter provides a program whereby freshmen become acquainted with the fields and opportunities in forestry. Plans include a newsletter, and presenting speakers on forestry and natural science.

Eta Kappa Nu Encourages Leadership

TUTORING in electrical engineering subjects and bi-monthly films on technical topics are among the activities sponsored by Eta Kappa Nu, electrical engineering honor society.

Their prime goal is to develop leadership, character, and scholastic achievement in this field. The members plan lectures and a newsletter.

Sigma Gamma Epsilon Touts Excellence

THE only national honor society devoted to the recognition of outstanding accomplishment in any area of earth science, Sigma Gamma Epsilon encourages academic excellence.

Members, undergraduates, graduates, and faculty, arrange guest speakers in the various fields of earth science.

Alpha Zeta Fosters Achievement In Agriculture

ALPHA Zeta recognizes outstanding character and academic achievement in the College of Agriculture. It's members sponsor a "Freshman smoker" and award a certificate of merit to the outstanding freshman in this field. All agricultural students unable to decide their major interest benefit from it's program of professional job opportunities.

Phi Kappa Phi Honors 23 Scholars

Founded in 1897, the national all-university scholastic honor society, Phi Kappa Phi, has two ruling purposes. One is the conviction that by recognizing and honoring those who have excelled in scholarship, other students may be inspired to work for a high standing. The other objective is the belief that scholarship is universal, not limited. One of the highest scholastic honors at the University is an undergraduate's election to the society in his junior or senior year. Faculty and graduate students are also eligible for election.

In Pursuit Of The Academic

ALL of more than 6000 undergraduates at the University are students in one sense or another, whether they work at it or not.

Some work at diligently. They go to classes, even boring ones and even for professors who don't take attendance. They spend their evenings studying—in the libe or at the dorm. And at the end of four years, they graduate.

Some don't work at it. They spend their time in the dark abyss of extra-curriculars, or in the non-academic pursuit of wine and women.

For those who develop the fine art of "cram" to peak perfection, the game is not lost—and if they study the right things for enough exams, take enough "gut" courses (harder and harder to find these days), they will graduate.

Of course, for many, the goal was never possible. They study the wrong outline series, they try in vain to coordinate social and academic spheres, they get the wrong professors. They lag in the race or they fall out—they don't graduate.

But, in some way, they have all learned a lesson.

The "real" steele—Conductor Ronald Steele.

A New Note For The Future

The University of Massachusetts Orchestra in rehearsal.

UNDER the direction of Mr. Ronald Steele, the new 66 member University Symphony Orchestra made its debut in December.

Steele, former associate conductor of the Michigan Youth Orchestra, gathered musicians from the student bodies of the University, Amherst, and Mt. Holyoke, as well as area residents. Steele joined the Music Department last fall, organizing the orchestra from an embryonic string structure.

After three weeks spent in recruiting new members, the response was so great that rehearsals had to be moved from the small Bartlett Auditorium to Bowker.

Featured in the spring concert were soloists who won the concert auditions held on campus during the year.

Now a member of the Symphony Orchestra League, Inc., the orchestra plans to establish a scholarship fund for its members.

Zoology Department

RESearch at a university is like a barometer—it's a good sign of what's to come.

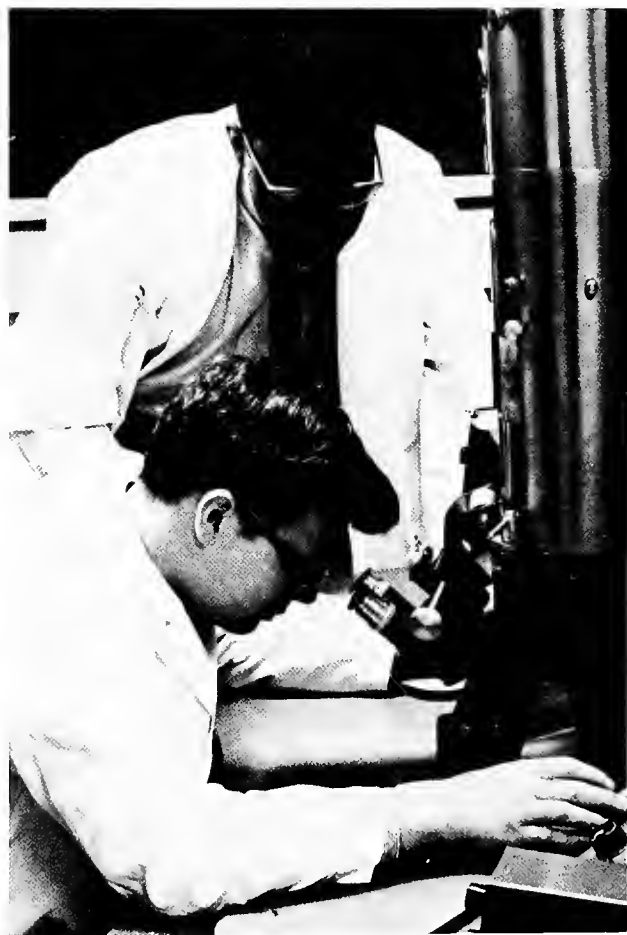

Augmented research in basic biochemistry by faculty and students in the University's Zoology Department is indicative of the expanding facilities, more intensive learning and resultant training available to students in science education at UMass.

Under a $232,503 U.S. Public Health Service grant, Dr. Donald Fairbairn, Commonwealth Head of the University's Zoology Department, is heading up research into the biochemistry of disease-causing animal parasites.

The research being done at Morrill Science Center on the University campus is not directly concerned with prevention or cure of parasitic diseases; it is rather aimed at uncovering the life processes of the parasites which cause such diseases as hookworm, malaria, ascariasis.

Professor Honigberg supervises tissue culture transfer made by Miss Vera King, who is working toward her Ph.D. in parasitology.

Professor Everett Anderson looks on as graduate student Eugene Foor examines the ultrastructure of parasites under an electron microscope.

Researches Disease-Causing Parasities

RESearch to provide the building blocks of better methods of control and cure for these diseases could affect hundreds of millions of persons afflicted, most in sub-tropical and underdeveloped countries.

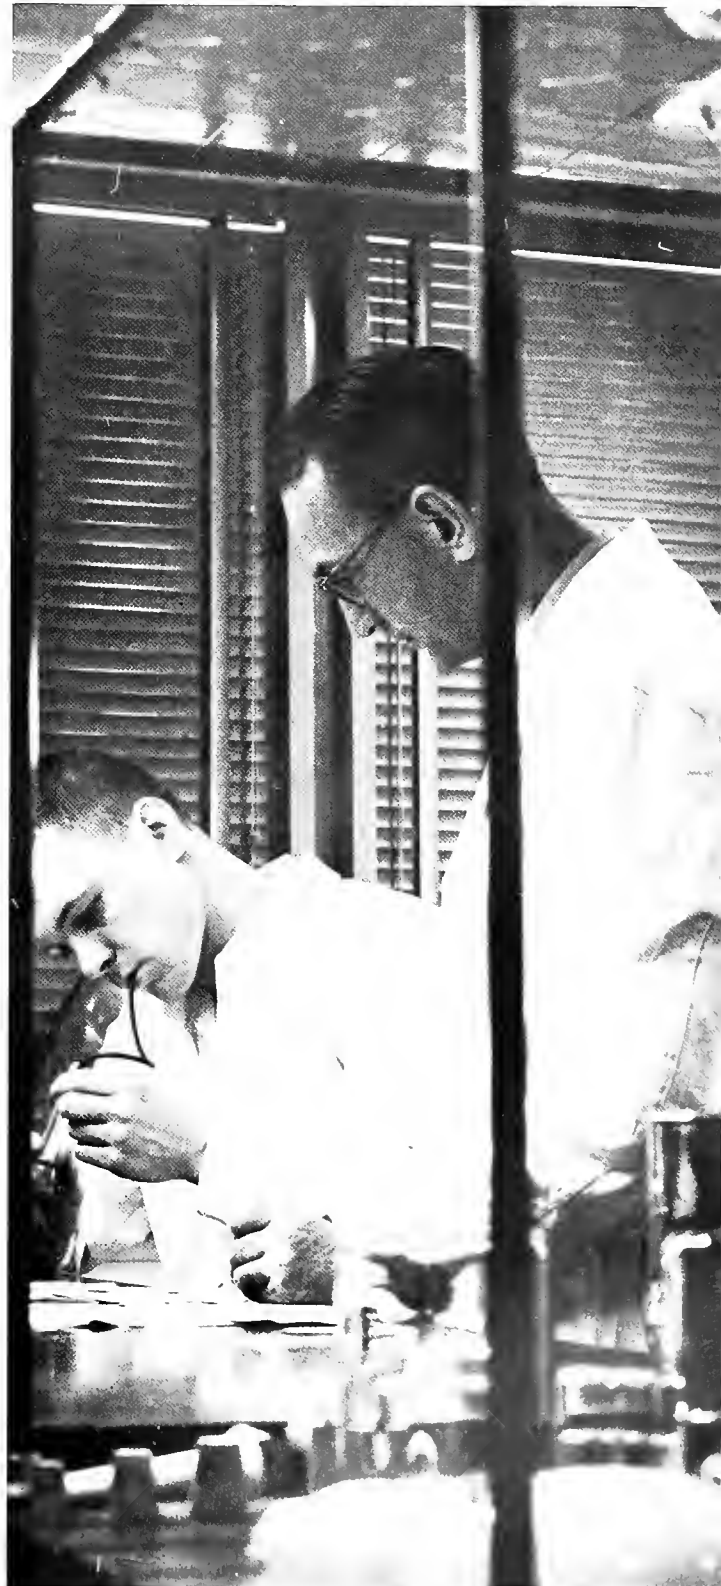

Describing himself as a biochemist with a deep interest in zoology, Fairbairn has been conducting work on animal parasites for ten years. Before arriving at UMass last year, he served as professor of parasitology at McGill University, Canada.

A training program for parasitologists now underway will provide basic instruction and opportunity for thesis research for graduates.

Dr. Bronislaw Honigberg, Dr. William Nutting, and Dr. Larry S. Roberts, each a specialist in his field, are working with Dr. Fairbairn on plans for a collaborative program with the Faculty of Medicine at Columbia. This program would provide intensive training in public health for graduate and post doctoral students.

Mrs. Martha Livingston and Dr. Rojender Abraham, a post-doctoral student in zoology from India, transfer cultures of a disease-causing protozoan parasite.

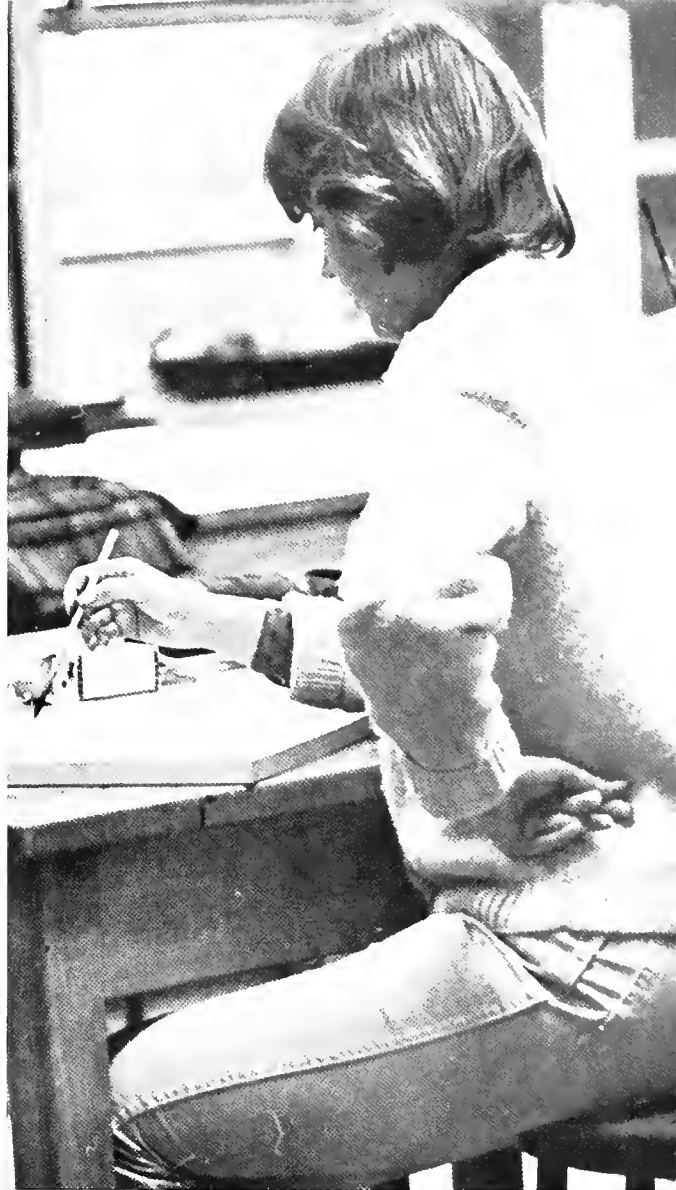

Dr. Fairbairn oversees graduate student Peter Jezyk as he applies techniques of thin-layer chromatography to identification of parasite fats.

New Business Administration Building

TO be opened for summer session, the new Business Administration building will provide extensive opportunities and facilities for research, conferences, and service. To cope with the increasing number of undergraduate and graduate students in Business, there will be staff expansion and further enrichment of curriculum.

The Business School is one of the four in New England accredited for graduate study. Plans are now in progress for the institution of a doctoral program.

Conducted by the School of Business in cooperation with The Experiment in International Living, is the Junior Executive Training Program. During the summer, up to 40 foreign students attend six weeks of instruction in six basic management fields. This intensive short program introduces the participants to modern American business management and promotes the broad objective of international understanding.

With financial support from the administration and state legislature, Dean Himy B. Kirchen and Assistant Dean John Conlon worked with the architect on design and internal facilities.

The building is another example of progress at the University.

When completed, the amphitheatre will contain five swivel chairs per bench desk. The blackboards are brown; there are projector facilities and a loudspeaker system.

Opens Horizons

BASEMENT and first floor classrooms are for undergraduate courses. On the second floor are located seminar rooms, a wall-to-wall carpeted library, and the Bureau of Business Research. Forty-seven offices, a conference room, and faculty lounge comprise the top floor. The two octagonal auditoriums have a 250 and 500 seat capacity. Sound-proofing and radiant heat are just two new features of the building.

Professor Joseph Langland--

“LANGLAND’S poems belong where they are, and where they are turns out to belong to poetry, thanks to him,” said Archibald MacLeish of UMass professor and American poet, Joe Langland.

It may not be extravagant to say that one of the University’s outstanding credits is a faculty member respected by his colleagues as one of the nation’s leading poets and by his students as an extremely fine teacher.

A teacher of poetry and creative writing in the department of English, he is found by students an “encouraging teacher,” one who “urges his students to come to him for help in their work.”

His most recent work, The Wheel of Summer, was published in May of 1963; In January, 1964, Langland received for it the Melville Cane Award from the Poetry Society of America for the outstanding book of poems published in 1963.

His first book of poetry, The Green Town, was published in 1956 and in 1962, his work was included in Poets Choice, an anthology in which 103 noted contemporary poets chose their favorite poem for inclusion.

His poems have appeared in several anthologies, and have been recorded for Folkways Records and for the Archives of the Library of Congress.

Langland came to UMass in 1959 from the University of Wyoming, and last year he represented UMass on ABC television’s “Meet the Professor” series.

*We rose from the banks. For the evening star
Our casual wishes and shadowy groves
Welled with a tougher grace. To the barn
We rocked with the great maternal cows
And milked them down with our gentlest hands.
Next morning took us like an old surprise
Fallen, with old corruption in our arms
We praised the animal urgencies of love,
Our long obedience. The mind of man,
Boyishly wandering out of the eye of God,
Seemed natural to our wills. Our bruised bones
Took on this sweet admission. Proud in the sun,
Calloused and cocked, wicked and wise and young.
We ran, three golden idols, back to chores,
Shouldered the wheel of summer, and journeyed on.*

—from Wheel of Summer
published by Dial Press, 1963

AT the University, he is active also as poetry editor of the Massachusetts Review, one of the top literary magazines in the country.

Although a four-college enterprise, it has offices in Memorial Hall on the University campus and draws funds primarily from the University, with Mount Holyoke, Smith, and Amherst contributing.

Edited by John Hicks of the UMass English department, it draws material from all over the world, receiving articles at the rate of over a dozen a day.

The March 1964 Review was issued in honor of the late President John Kennedy, and included a special supplement on twentieth-century Irish literature.

The proof is in the pudding and the excellence of a magazine is well attributed by the contents between its covers—the March issue included previously unpublished letters of Yeats, Synge, Shaw; poems by Thomas Kinsella, Richard Murphy, John Hewitt; articles by Robin Skelton, Denis Johnston and others.

A pilot program initiated this year by the School of Home Economics gave 13 senior women field experience in department store retailing for seven weeks preceeding Christmas vacation.

Unlike other schools' programs in retailing, the UMass project provides supervisory as well as sales training.

The cooperative work experience aims at providing a basis for future specialization, by giving students opportunity to learn how they work in real-life situations.

WORKING closely with store executives and students in the program was Mrs. Mary Troxell, Retailing Coordinator at UMass' School of Home Economics.

Reports from students and evaluations by the stores aided her in judging each students' progress.

With each student's skills and abilities pinpointed, a second semester program could be built around this knowledge.

The stores involved were: Filene's, Jordan Marsh's and R. H. Stearn's in Boston; Steiger's, Forbes and Wallace in Springfield; and G. Fox in Hartford, Connecticut.

UMass School of Basic Research,

ESSENTIAL to the growth of a university are two things—experimentation to extend the boundaries of knowledge and a constant emphasis on and encouragement of the individual student.

Thus, student participation in basic research in the School of Engineering has the effect of advancement on two fronts.

Basic research into the behavior of materials started two years ago under a faculty research grant—is headed up by Assistant Professor Denton Harris of the department of civil engineering.

Presently carried out as an undergraduate research project, it may be elected by senior engineering majors with a 3.0 cumulative average or higher. Participants this year were Leon Heselton and Dave Foster.

One important result—the student develops a feeling for experimental research.

Leon Heselton works with the frame holding the crystal growing furnace, which produce samples used in testing.

Professor Harris checks high speed oscilloscope, which visually shows changes in a varying current. On the right is a device for impacting the sample.

Engineering Stimulates Accelerated Learning

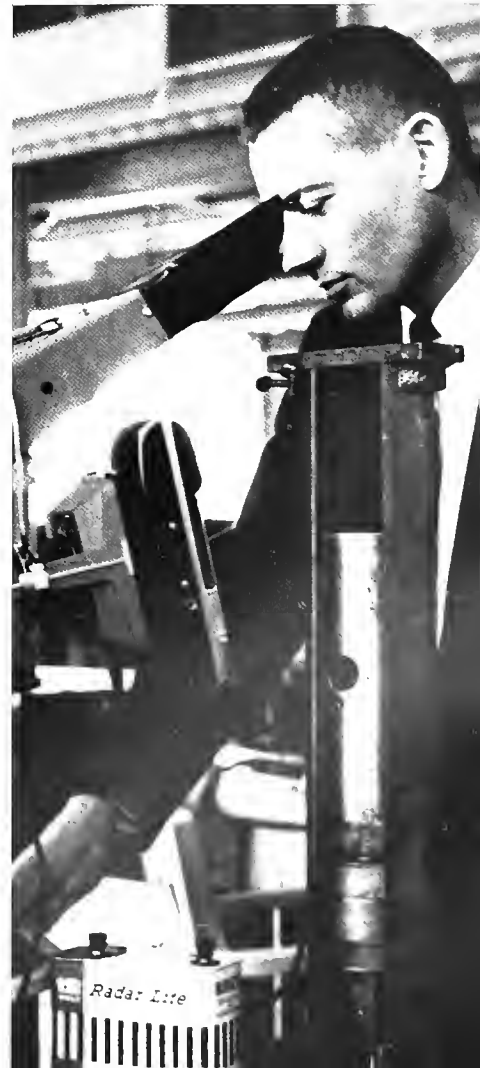

FIRST step toward the research objective is preparation of a sample of the metal to be tested. For example, a crystal of aluminum may be grown to a particular size in a precisely controlled furnace over a period of three or four weeks.

The sample is then subjected to a force pulse to produce imperfection in the crystal—such action perhaps produced by firing a high caliber rifle shell at the sample.

Metallographic analysis of the sample crystal follows to determine the extent and nature of imperfections produced. The information is analyzed toward the ultimate objective of formulating a theory of generation of imperfections.

Typically accelerated learning in the University's five accredited engineering departments—Civil, Electrical, Mechanical, Chemical, Industrial—means the engineering student graduates with 145 credits of course work (25 above the University minimum for graduation), incorporating essentially five years of work into four years.

Recently instituted was a voluntary Engineering Freshman Orientation program, given before the opening of the fall semester, to provide entering engineering freshmen with fundamental knowledge needed to keep pace in their rapidly advancing field.

School of Education;

IN terms of student enrollment, the College of Agriculture is second only to the College of Arts and Sciences.

Students in the four-year instruction program major in agronomy, dairy and animal science, agricultural and food economics, agricultural engineering, entomology and plant pathology.

Other major fields not commonly associated with "production" agriculture are food science and technology, forestry and wildlife management, horticulture, landscape architecture and poultry science.

Land architecture student designs model landscape.

Agriculture--Progress, Research, Public Service, Awarded University's First Endowed Chair

SERVICES of the College of Agriculture extend beyond the classrooms on the University campus. Massachusetts citizens are affected through three other main divisions of scientific research, Extension and public service activities.

Research is, for the most part, carried out at the Agricultural Experiment Station with facilities at the Field Station in Waltham (specializing in horticultural crops) and at the Wareham Cranberry Station. On-campus research is carried on by the Institute of Agricultural and Industrial Microbiology and by the Shade Tree Laboratory of the department of entomology and plant pathology.

Another task of the College of Agriculture is continuing education through the Cooperative Extension Service, established in 1914.

Public service activities are another facet of the College of Agriculture. These include administering statutory regulations pertaining to the sale of feeds, fertilizers, seeds and the use of milk testing glassware.

These duties have been assigned by the Massachusetts General Court to the Experiment Station, which is equipped with the necessary equipment and personnel.

The University's first endowed chair, the Nicholas Appert Endowment Chair, was instituted this year and awarded to Dr. Frederic J. Francis of the food technology department in the School of Agriculture.

The Chair was financed by the Glass Containers Manufacturing Institute following the department's 25 years of research on food packaging, and awarded Dr. Francis for his continuing research and far-reaching progress in this field.

Winona LeBlanc and Ann Fryer prepare for a physiology lab at the University.

As part of their hospital program, students receive training in X-ray examinations.

Nursing Students Back On Campus

NEWLY instituted this year by the University's School of Nursing is a program allowing students of nursing to live on campus, thus permitting them a broadened academic scope through greater choice of electives.

Instruction and correlated clinical nursing practice is given at the Wesson Memorial Hospital by the nursing faculty of the University.

Instruction is initiated in the sophomore year when, under supervision, the student is placed in charge of a patient's care. As juniors, three days a week at the Springfield Hospital entails practical training in child and adult care.

Seniors are afforded four days a week at the hospital; their studies consisting of pediatrics, maternal and public health nursing.

Thus, their first two years at the University comprises an educational foundation through courses in the biological, behavioral and social sciences as well as humanities.

Opportunities offered to the future nurses are demonstrated in their last two years when specialized training in all branches is given.

Graduates of the School, started in 1954, are eligible for the licensing examination for registration in any state.

School of Provincialism,

WHEN the University and Florida State founded a Student Exchange Program in 1961 as "an initial attack on the problem of provincialism in elementary education," the two schools swapped seven students for a semester.

Since then, the University of New Mexico and the University of South Florida have joined the Program, sponsored at UMass by the School of Education.

Education Exchange Program Attacks

Offers New Views Of Old Topics

EXCHANGE students pay only the usual tuition rates of their own school. Eligible for participation is any junior education major with a 2.5 cumulative average. Applicants are rated competitively. Plans are underway to include students in all majors.

Dr. Robert L. Byrne, Jr., of the UMass School of Education, present coordinator, stated the program's main value lies in the broadening of educational horizons. These participants come into contact with teaching problems they might never encounter at their home institution. Dr. Byrne is also responsible for room accommodations and social and academic adjustments.

First semester, 14 University students attended the three other colleges, and seven students from the University of New Mexico studied here. Second semester, six University coeds trained at the University of New Mexico, and UMass played host to 20 visiting participants.

With the wholehearted cooperation of the administration, including Dean of Men and Women, Registrar, Treasurer's office, and Housing, the program has been successful.

The University of Maine will be included in the exchanges next semester and it is hoped that the program will eventually extend across the nation. This will facilitate the selection of a member school whose studies could greatly complement the student's major.

The program serves to broaden the participant's views and provide a more complete education via travel, adjustment, and perhaps a different approach to a particular subject.

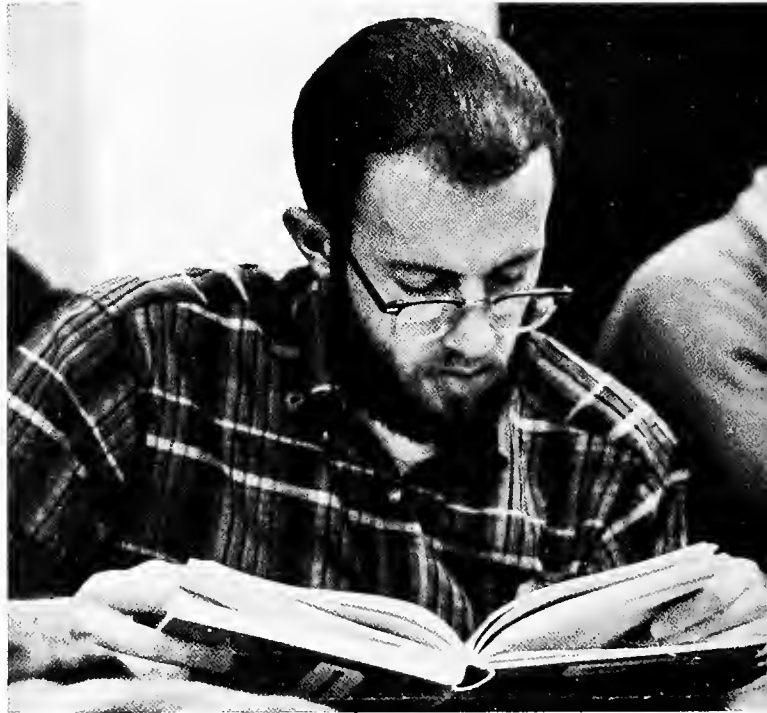

At the Education Complex, University of Mexico, Albuquerque, are UMass exchange students Anne MacGregor, Ellen MacGregor, Joan Congdon, Kathleen Manning.

Highlighting His University Education--

WHEN a student draws together threads of education to produce a pattern of his own, four years of academic learning may be termed successful.

Sam Gorvine is combining interpretive and creative aspects of his English major in a literary work of his own, a short novel tentatively entitled The Darkness of the White Door.

The novel began as a short story for a creative writing course in his junior year and, according to Sam, "It just got out of hand."

Rights to the book have been bought by the Houghton-Mifflin Publishing Company of Boston. Gorvine plans to complete the rough draft by mid-summer, 1964.

Theme of the novel is provided by the main character, who wanders through several countries, discovering in the course of his journey many concepts which man has learned about himself in the past few decades.

In Spring, 1963, Sam won national recognition from the Atlantic Monthly through their Annual Creative Writing Contest for Students.

His story, "Die With Your Pants On," was accorded fifth place in the contest and "Joe" received a certificate of merit. Both stories appeared in Caesura, the University's student literary magazine.

After graduation, Sam hopes to initiate a career in publishing.

"The Darkness Of The White Door"

The Student Initiates His Own Pattern

In testing the materials, Mark has been measuring the maximum current flow per unit electrode surface at a fixed voltage.

Rothstein Investigates Fuel Cell Conversion

FOR his senior honors project, chemical engineering major Mark Rothstein made an investigative study of the hydrogen-oxygen fuel cell.

The fuel cell, a unit designed to convert chemical energy directly into electrical energy, is of considerable importance today because of such space programs as Project Apollo. In the cell, hydrogen and oxygen combine electrochemically to form H_2O with a release of chemical energy.

Studies show that the rate of energy conversion in the fuel cell proceeds at a rather slow rate. Mark proposed making measurements to throw light on how this rate may be speeded up—aiming at discovering a catalyst to accelerate this rate.

If a suitable catalyst was uncovered, the power of fuel cells could be used in space cells to provide a type of battery that never needed recharging, and perhaps ultimately a cheaper means of electricity.

As a sophomore, Mark made preliminary laboratory studies on this problem, continuing them this year on the suggestion of his advisor, Dr. H. C. Duus.

His early studies, Mark says, indicate the slow rate of conversion is due to difficulty in breaking down a perhydroxyl ion which is supposed to form at the oxygen electrode.

Serving as editorial editor of Engineering Journal and program director for the American Institute of Engineers, he plans to attend graduate school next year.

The cell consists essentially of a membrane soaked with an electrolytic solution, which separates two nickel screens that form the positive and negative electrodes.

Case Study Of Aged By Sociology Senior

VOLUNTARY Associations among the aged was the subject of an exploratory study carried out by sociology major Dorothy Barnes for her Senior Honors Project.

Specifically, she made a case study of the Amherst Golden Age Club to determine the manifest and latent functions of such an organization and the social characteristics of those persons who participate in it.

The topic was suggested to her, she said, by Dr. Clarence King of the sociology department.

The method of study involved constructing an interview schedule and administering it to each member of the club.

Participant observation was exercised by her attendance at the Golden Age meetings and functions.

Library research was conducted in areas of gerontology and social organization.

Starting the project with no set ideas, she tested members' social class, affiliations past and present.

In her paper, she combined information gathered through observation and research to construct a general picture of the Club and its members, specifically, and the area of aged associations in general.

Along with the other 80 or more seniors involved in honors work, she received three credits for each semester of work completed on The Honors Project.

Public Health Seniors

Submerged In Water Problems

TWO public health seniors are involved in honors projects of public interest.

"The Principles and Practices in Floridation of Public Water Supply" is the topic chosen by Richard Gladstone. Correlating and analyzing data from texts and industry, the major part of his thesis concerns the practical aspects of fluoridation—the advantages of materials and methods presently used.

It attempts to counteract opposition in the general public by clarifying the effect of fluoridating their local water supply.

To determine a better method than the presently accepted coliform standard as an index of pollution in swimming pool water, Richard Rose is devoting his project to favor the "cocci" standard over the coliform standard.

Taking weekly samples from the two University pools and Smith College pool, he collects information to compare the two standards.

In addition, Richard is correlating the effects of each halide in different concentrations upon the water.

Predicating his thesis, to be published upon completion, on the relatively fewer number of coliforms than cocci present in swimming pool water, Richard hopes to prove the significance of the use of cocci index.

Richard Gladstone reviews material with advisor, Mr. Robert Perriello. Also advising him is Mr. Karol Wisniewski.

Richard Rose observes bacterial growth in agar tubes.

Undefeated--First Since '89

- Opponents Get Only 12 Points
- Bowl Bids Turned Down

THE Redmen recorded the most successful football season in the history of the University.

While playing their first undefeated season since 1889, when they played only two games, the Redmen ground out 3,060 yards for 146 first downs and a total of 265 points and defensively allowed only 475 yards, 85 first downs and 12 points.

This record earned them the promise of a Tangerine Bowl Bid, a solid bid from the Liberty Bowl, and undisputed possession of the Yankee Conference Championship.

Head Coach Vic Fusia was named major New England Coach of the year; U.P.I. rated the team first in New England small colleges and third in the Nation.

A.P. rated the Fusiamen as fourth in the nation in the small college class.

Spoilers At UConn's Homecoming, 21-3 As Huskies Get Field Goal

THE Fusiamen dampened the spirits of the UConn Homecoming crowd as it rolled over the Huskies by a score of 21-3.

The stellar offensive line created opportunities for 245 running yards while the defensive line held the Husky offensive to 66 yards through the middle yet could not block the only field goal of the year surrendered by the Redmen.

UMass Takes URI For Homecoming Ride, 57-0

THE 1963 Homecoming throng was thrilled as the Redmen trampled the Rhode Island Rams.

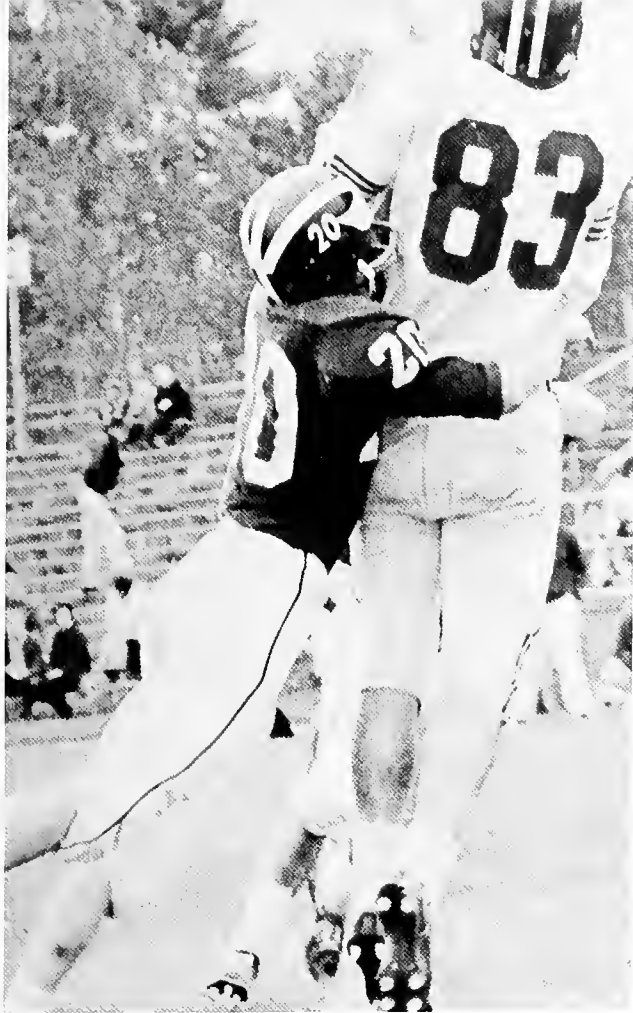

While rolling up their 57 points the UMass eleven gained 292 running yards and 143 aerial yards and watched while the defense held Rhode Island to a total offense of 123 yards and on points.

Depth Wears B.U. To 21-0 As Mass. Makes 2d Half Bid

THE Fusia formula of balance and consistency led the Redmen to their most important and most impressive victory, and made B.U. the sixth consecutive Homecoming victim of the Redmen in the past few years.

Once again the amazing Redmen defense shut out their opponents, and the explosive offensive ran up the decisive total of 21 points—14 of these coming in the second half.

The depth of the squad was the decisive factor in this game. Each unit functioned as smoothly as the other and afforded no rest for the weary Terriers.

THE Fusiemen clinched their first exclusive Yankee Conference Beanpot championship by soundly trouncing Vermont 41-0.

While amassing these 41 points the Redmen gained 278 yards over the Fairways and 149 yards through the airways. The defense held the Catamounts to 74 yards on the turf and 19 aerial yards.

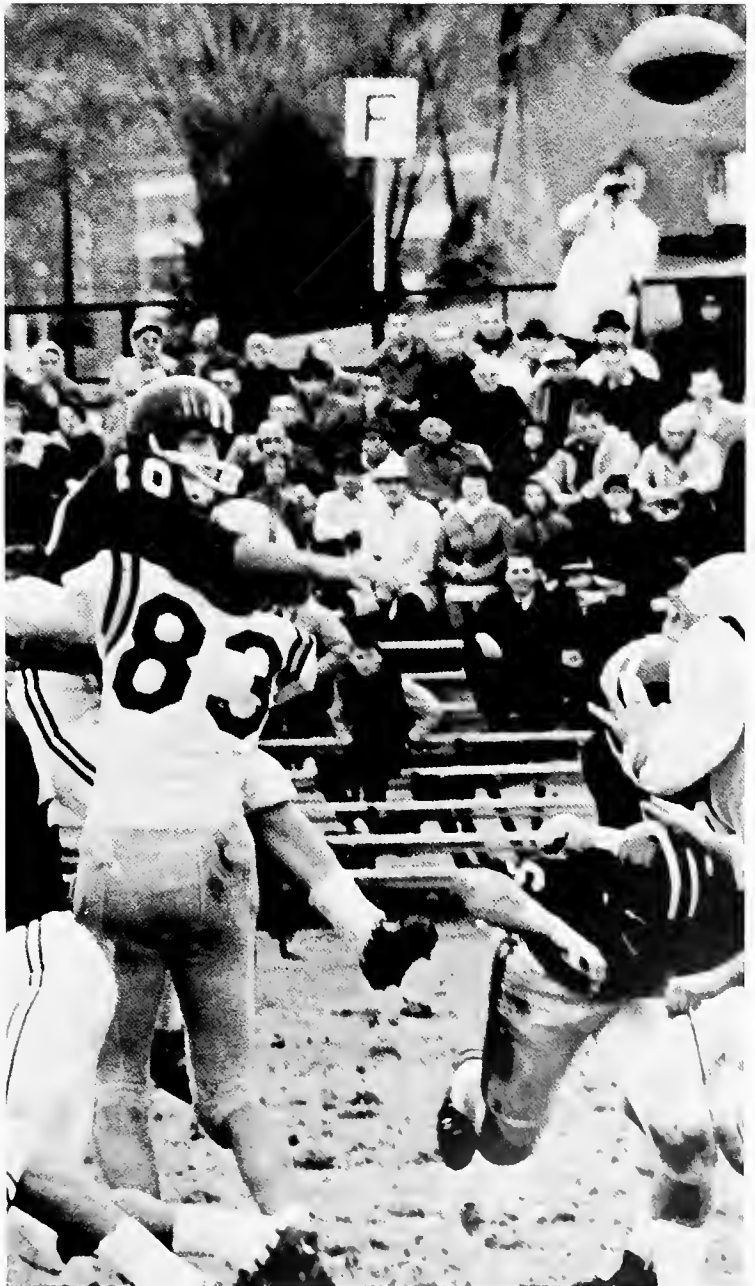

UMass wins undisputed possession of "beanpot" for first time in history.

Aces Trumped 42-0 By UMass-- Redmen Rack Up 394 yds. to 46

A.I.C. was outclassed by a far superior squad as they valiantly succumbed to the UMass eleven 42-0.

Once again UMass gained impressive yardage both on the ground (282 yards) and in the air (112 yards) while the defense allowed the Aces a meager total of 46 yards.

U.N.H., Last Obstacle to Undefeated Season, Falls

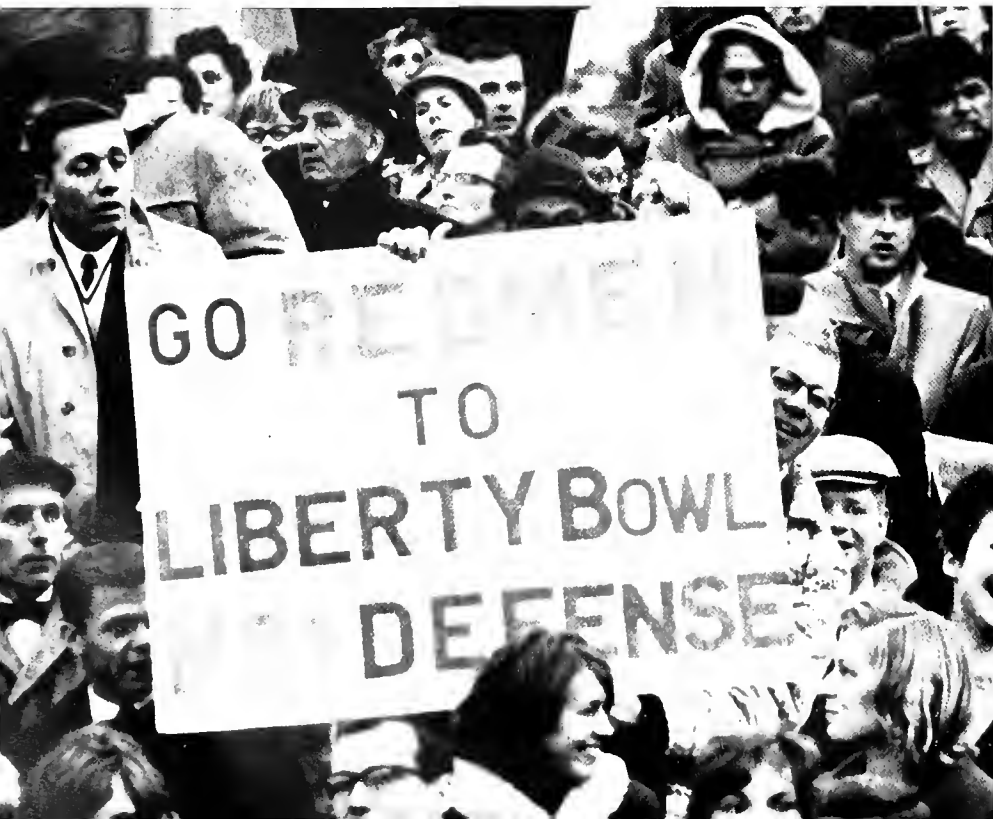

THE Redmen finished their first undefeated season in 74 years by mauling the wild cats 48-2.

The offense once again compiled an awesome record of 456 yards while the defensive unit conceded a scanty 103.

The only safety against UMass was scored during this contest.

Exuberant Massachusetts fans call for bigger and better things for the Redmen.

No personality better exemplifies the spirit of the team that "gave its all" than does Freddy Lewis. Freddy did not see as much action as he would have liked this year, but in his 36 carries he averaged a more than respectable 4.9 yards/carry.

Freddy's efforts have been justly rewarded by a professional bid from the Oakland Raiders.

Football games this year were spiced with the enthusiasm created by the University of Massachusetts cheerleaders. The squad rallied the crowd with rousing cheers, and this year matched the football team with pushups for every point scored.

Booters End Rugged Season

INEXPERIENCED and hampered by injuries, the UMass booters completed the '63 season with a 2-7-1 record.

The team began the season by bowing to Army 4-1. The first half of the game ended scoreless, but the second half saw a fresh Army team score 4 goals with the lone UMass goal coming as a penalty boot by Dick Leete. UMass gained an early advantage in the Coast Guard game, but was unable to capitalize on it and Coast Guard edged the Redmen 2-1.

Williams exhibited a well-drilled, experienced team that shut out the booters 2-0. Play was rough on both sides in the Trinity game, adding several names to the Redmen's casualty list and making the Baigg's Men the underdogs once again as the game ended 5-9.

At the end of the Connecticut game UMass was trounced 9-4—and six of the 11 starters were injured. Spirit and guts carried the booters to a 3-3 tie in the W.P.I. game. Enthused, the team rallied to override Rhode Island 4-0 and Tufts 5-4.

Unfortunately, a fighting spirit wasn't enough to compensate for the team's lack of depth and they ended the season losing to Clark 1-0 and to Amherst 2-0.

BASKETBALL '63-'64 was undoubtedly one of the most productive in University history. The season ushered in a new coach and a new type of basketball. Johnny Orr brought his fast breaking offense from Wisconsin, an offense that featured speed, excitement, and explosive scoring, to replace the deliberate and cautious style of former years. Even though gifted with the return of the starting five from the previous year, most experts gave Massachusetts little hope of improving over last year's performance. Few expected what actually happened.

Massachusetts, averaging 83.8 points a ballgame, finished among the top 20 in the country in scoring, and broke the school record of 76.6 set in '54-'55. They scored 833 field goals to surpass the old mark of 710. They also had a better shooting average, .427, then the previous high of .422. Twice during the season they broke the record for the most points scored in a single game, throwing in 115 against St. Peters earlier in the season and then hitting 120 points against Vermont. Not only team but individual records were set. Sixteen Chuck O'Rourke had 308 rebounds in the season to pass the old mark set by Captain Rodger Twitchell at 292. Peter Bernard, averaging 19.5 points a ball game, finished number four while Rodger Twitchell was second with 11.51 for his career performance.

It was also noteworthy that four of the starting five averaged in double figures, attesting to the all around balance and team work that was necessary to make the Orr offense a success. Behind Bernard was Chuck O'Rourke with an average of 14.9 points a game, the 'Twitch' with 13.8, and Tim Edwards with a 10.8 average. Other support was supplied by Jim Painten who averaged 8.4 points a game, Charlie Kingston at 4.9 and Paul Gullicksen at 4.5.

THE team finished the season with 15 wins and 9 losses giving them third place in the Yankee Conference.

DEFEATING M.I.T., Amherst, and UConn, twice each, going down in defeat to Bowdoin, New Hampshire, Army, Pennsylvania, Colgate, Williams, and Middlebury the puckmen tied Vermont twice to compile a 6-9-2 season record.

High scorers for the season were Kenny Palm, Charlie Glew, Pete Hurd, Bob Lee and Bob Edmonston. Captain Glew completed his career fifth in University history in assists, fourth in total points and second in goal scoring. He undoubtedly would have shattered each of these records had he not been injured in the Colgate conflict with one third of the season left to play. Hat tricks were submitted by Glew, Palm and Lee.

Dick Phillips developed into an excellent defenseman in his third year of varsity play. Junior goalie Archer "Skip" Bowen also performed extremely well allowing 60 goals but stopping 9 times that many.

Season highlights were, the UConn victory, that gave us third place in the Yan Con tournament, and the two victories over our cross town rivals, Amherst College.

Trackmen Sprint To Victory

IN it's 1963-64 season the varsity indoor track team compiled a 2-1 record in dual meets and a fourth place finish in the Yan Con Championships. Pacing the Redmen throughout the season was senior Bob "Digger" Brouillet, the greatest distance runner ever seen at UMass. Bob scored 16 points in the dual meets as well as winning both the mile and 2 mile at the Yan Cons. He also took a fourth in the IC4A's 2 mile while setting a school record of 9:11.1.

Sophomore John Mederios was top point man for the Redmen as he scored 49 points while competing in the high and low hurdles, broad jump and dash. The only loss for UMass was at the hands of a powerful Northeastern squad which triumphed 79-34. Mederios scored 19 of the Redmen's points. UMass defeated Tufts 75-36 and UConn 77-36. Jim Wrynn earned a third place position in the Yan Cons and John Harrington set school records in both the 60 yard high hurdles and 60 yard low hurdles. Dave Sadowsky did not compete because of an injury and Fred Lewis hampered by a lack of facilities never got near the 13' record he set as a sophomore.

The mile relay team of Doug Sloane, Gene Colburn, Craig Erickson, and Jim Collins ran 3:30.3 to record the second fastest mile relay run indoors at UMass in five years. With the help of this year's undefeated freshmen team, UMass looks forward to an even better season next year.

CULMINATING the 1964 season, Mike Rothschild copped two firsts in the New England Championships.

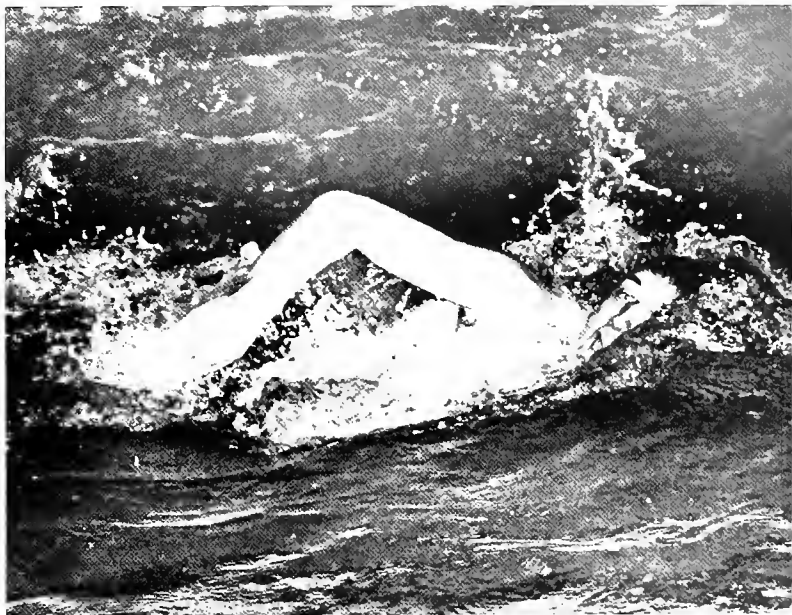

Coach Joe Rogers' swimmers headed by co-captains Rothschild and Bjornholm moved to their best season in a decade, winning six and losing only three.

This season saw many new records set. Rothschild established a time of 5:18.0 in the 500 yard freestyle and 1:56.0 in the 200 yard freestyle. The backstroke record of 2:13.3 went to Bjornholm, while O'Sullivan set a 2:36 mark for the butterfly. The freestyle relay team of Wilson, Daniels, Rothschild and Bjornholm bettered all previous times in a 3:34.6 win.

Koss proved to be a key point-getter in the backstroke while Monnier and Grybko led the team in the breaststroke. Wilson, Daniels and Cowern racked up points in the freestyle and Hanley took his points in the diving competition.

SOPHOMORE coach Eric Kjeldson and Captain Dave Williams led the gymnastics team to a 3-4 season, defeating Southern Connecticut, Ithaca and Cortland, and losing by slim margins to the gymnastic giants Temple, Springfield, Army and Penn State. Dave Williams, one of the best gymnasts in the area, and team high scorer for the past two years, and Al Cohen and Dan St. John turned in consistently outstanding performances.

Gymnastics is fast growing both in participation and spectator interest. With a strong freshman team achieving varsity status and brilliant sophomores like Dan, Al, and Coach Kjeldson the big time dream is sure to become a reality.

THE UMass Nine won their four final games to wind up the season with a 10-7 record.

Brilliant performances from the mound were exhibited by Lew Pia (4-2) and Dick Wilson (4-4). The excellent support afforded by Tony Williams and Corky Schmoyer was justly rewarded with major league contracts from the Orioles and the Red Sox respectively.

Although Coach Lorden is losing about one-half of the starting line-up, the depth yielded by this year's squad and upcoming freshmen should amply plug these holes and insure another successful season.

Gunmen On Target

DRAWING a bead on their 1964 season, the University Rifle Team was optimistic. They squeezed, fired, scored a bullseye, and finished undefeated in Yankee Conference competition for their second straight year. In their entire season Co-Captains Wells and Nataupsky found it necessary to call for slight adjustments only after meets with Citadel and the Naval Academy. All other competitors became victims in their show-downs with the UMass gunmen. The deadeyes are considered a major threat in the national rifle association sectional meet.

Intramural Program Expanded

EXPANSION has been the watchword for the intramural program. The influx of student participation has been absorbed by an increase in the number of sports available for competition and increased facilities.

The roster of events range from ping pong to football including tennis, basketball, bowling, badminton, volleyball, wrestling, softball, lacrosse, and track. The Steven Davis award is given annually to the intramural champions.

The major facility expansion was the dedication of Boyden gymnasium. The new gym, resembling an airplane hangar, boasts class rooms, a pool, squash courts, basketball courts, steam rooms, added locker room facilities and weight training equipment, all readily available.

ENCOURAGING original dance routines set to music, the Modern Dance Club boasts of three male members this year, in addition to 22 girls.

Combining creative ability and talent is a means of satisfaction and self-expression. Their self-choreographed dance compositions are meaningful and enjoyable to the viewer and performer alike.

Members are selected in the fall through competitive try-outs.

There are opportunities throughout the year to attend guest lectures and demonstrations in various modern dancing techniques at the University and at other institutions.

With Miss Georgia Reid as faculty director, their tenth annual spring concert was presented in April. Aiming for variety, the program included ballet and jazz.

Sky-Divers Assume Competition Status

SPORT Parachuting at the University has developed from a club in 1959 to a competitive team in 1964. The highlight of the year is the National Collegiate Sport Parachuting meet held at Orange, Mass. which attracts participants from the entire nation. Berths on the squad are earned through intraclub competition.

With the expanding interest in this "spaceage sport" at the University, the prospects for this team appear brighter than ever.

IN its third year, the UMass Ski Team had a successful season under the direction of coach MacConnell. They participated in the 11-college league and finished fourth with a 55-25 win-loss record.

Training began about the middle of November with a 5-mile daily crosscountry run and two pre-season winter training sessions during Christmas vacation and intersession. During the season, the team practiced Saturdays, Sundays and holidays.

Prospects look bright for next year with Tom Clark and Dick Woods as co-captains.

Round Robins Draw Out Sorority Hopefuls

Some of the 500 girls to seek a place in feminine Greek circles stroll out on a bright Sunday.

Rushees and sisters get acquainted.

MORE than 500 University women set out on a Sunday in October to find a home.

Sorority round robins had kicked off. The girls were taken in groups to each of the 10 sororities on campus for a brief 15 minute meeting with the sisters.

Round robins served the purpose of an appetizer, an introduction to the houses and sisters on an objective level to allow the potential pledges to get acquainted with potential sisters.

There followed one week of open houses that allowed girls who had registered at round robins the opportunity to investigate their choices more closely. During this time open parties introduced the social life of the sorority girl.

Theme parties narrowed the group of aspirants and the closed date followed. Once the girls had received bids, pledging was about to begin.

As Panhellenic Rushing Begins

Memorial Hall functions as a registration center for rushees.

Mem Hall Erupts,

MEMORIAL Hall bore the brunt of the assault of hopeful rushees when, following closed date, matching bids were distributed.

Over 160 girls received the small white envelope that invited them to pledge the house of their choice.

In true feminine style emotion burst loose in a cacaphony of shouts, shrieks and squeals that announced the acceptance of a new Pi Phi, or Kappa, or Iota Gam.

The official act of pledging followed the same evening, and with sisters and pledges in the ranks, sorority houses took over the Student Union's Hatch for a dizzy display of delight. For the first time the new pledges acted with the sisters as a unit, as a house.

In the Hatch they sang house songs, clambered on to tables and led cheers, and otherwise released the thrilling rush of emotion held up for this moment.

WITH growth and expansion comes the necessity for new organizations. Last year saw the formation of two new sorority organizations: Sorority Presidents' Council and Junior Panhellenic Council.

With the formation of new organizations comes the necessity of coordination with existing organizations. Thus Sorority Presidents' Council and Junior Panhellenic Council were incorporated within the existing Panhellenic Council's Constitution.

All three organizations retain their identity, but this union will permit sorority resources to be used more efficiently and will enable the organizations to work with a minimum of overlapping.

The Panhellenic Council is the organization of all UMass Greek-letter sororities. Each College having two or more national sororities has a local Panhellenic Association to which each sorority sends one junior and one senior.

The aim of Panhellenic is to foster a spirit of friendliness between sororities and to encourage active cooperative interest in the development of all college women. The Council regulates rushing by making rules which are approved by the sororities.

Sorority Presidents' Council provides a forum for the discussion of common individual and social problems; to coordinate sororities on the executive level, and to make recommendations and statements of policy on pertinent issues.

Junior Panhellenic Council is comprised of pledges who promote friendliness and spirit among pledges and to prepare a training ground for the Panhellenic Council.

Alpha Chi's study plan, which has just been in effect for a year and a half, is very successful. Every sister falling below a 2.5 average is required to put in a certain amount of library study hours a week. All pledges are included in this program. The new pledge program centers around the 22 Pearl Plan. Before initiation each pledge must fill her lyre with twenty-two pearls; each pearl is given for certain things, such as attending a cultural event or getting an A on an exam.

Alpha Chi participates in all the Panhellenic events. They placed second in the Declamation. Social Calendar (besides the exchanges with fraternities and a Christmas party for underprivileged children) is climaxed by the annual Pledge Formal, held at Wiggins Tavern every Spring.

The Kappas rush—only to move to new house.

TWO years old and Iota Gam is no longer a baby . . . a house of their own . . . a week to move in! . . . A hectic semester, but phone and Iotas were finally installed. Candle ceremonies serenading, exchanges, corporation meetings . . . we're organized!

In May of 1962 Iota Gamma Upsilon established itself as the tenth and newest sorority on campus. Realizing the need for more sororities on a rapidly growing campus and hoping to join the Greek world, five freshmen women undertook the task of forming a local sorority, to be the only one on the University campus.

The effects of nearly a year's independent organization are beginning to yield the bounty of its investment. What they have learned about budgets, contracts, house decorating and a multitude of other areas could never be gleaned from textbooks. What they have from learning together cannot be calculated.

GAMMA Eta chapter of Kappa Alpha Theta was founded at the University of Massachusetts February 6, 1943 from the local sorority of Phi Zeta. The Massachusetts chapter has changed considerably since its first days.

More important, though, are the aspects of the chapter that have not changed. Twenty years have found them still generating warm friendships that will last a lifetime, still sending donations from their projects to The Institute of Logopedics at Wichita, Kansas; still tutoring their pledges in academic and social knowledge. 1963 found them particularly happy when one of the sisters took first place in the sorority declamation competition and several of seniors were appointed to Who's Who.

However, overriding such fleeting honors, is the deep glow of pride and happiness felt by members of Kappa Alpha Theta and the deep hope that Gamma Eta will not change its essential good qualities in the years to come.

Kappa Kappa Gamma Moves To New Quarters On Nutting Avenue

They predicted a winner with their "Fuchsia."

K K Γ

THE change of address from Lincoln Avenue to Nutting Avenue has certainly brought some changes into the lives of the sisters of Kappa Kappa Gamma. But the passage of time, however lengthy, cannot erase the memories of the little "ginger bread" house and the last senior class to live there, or the fun of living amidst the dust, plastering and hammering as the new house was completed.

The old memories are mixed with the new-house meetings sitting on barrels and ladders, to "We need a fourth for bridge!"

We aim to make Kappa Kappa Gamma an integral part of the college community, stressing high scholarship and philanthropic activities. Under the guidance of our housemother Mrs. Donald Alderman, and our house officers we feel that, especially this year, our aims were accomplished.

Lambda Delta Phi Retires Panhellenic Scholarship Tray

IN June, 1961, Lambda Delta Phi, with Alpha Chapter at UMass., became the first national nondiscriminatory sorority. As stated in the constitution, they continue to strive for "living democracy through friendship."

Scholarship doesn't falter at Lambda Phi; for with the scholarship program, the sisters combined efforts to win the scholarship tray for the third year in succession.

The various activities in which the sisters participate, such as religious groups, Operetta Guild, the Junior and Senior Executive Boards and Collegian. Also, turning to the serious side we have undertaken such projects as knitting mittens and scarves for underprivileged children.

During the past year, Lambda Delta Phi has continued to grow and expand in membership, adding chapters on the West Coast; and Alpha chapter announces that its most cherished dream—a new house—will soon be realized.

Every aspect of college life is touched by Greeks.

Bev Botelho Takes Dec., Theta Sing

GROWTH of the University's sorority community rendered it impractical this year to continue coordinating the Sorority Sing and Declamation Competitions.

Thus, separate programs were held for the two Panhellenic Council sponsored events this year. The dramatization was held in October and the sing was presented in early March, dedicated to the late President Kennedy.

Performances at the October competition, in which representatives of the campus' ten sororities competed for recognition, were rated on dramatic interpretation, choice of selection, visual and auditory attributes of performers.

Copping first place was Beverly Botelho of Kappa Alpha Theta; second honors went to Alpha Chi Omega's Deena Ferrigno; Frances Castine of Iota Gamma Upsilon and Lynette Arcasdi of Sigma Kappa tied for third place.

A program comprised of folk melodies, jazz tunes and traditional classics lent sparkling variety to the Spring competition.

Kappa Alpha Theta again took honors, taking first place for their renditions of "Turn Ye to Me" and "I Got Rhythm."

Chi Omega's performance of "Elijah Rock" and "Lili Marlene" was awarded second place.

"Days of Wine and Roses" and "Tzena," merited the sisters of Sigma Sigma Sigma third place ribbons.

Song performances are rated on the basis of group appearance, choice of number, tone quality and balance, expression. The performances were, as always, directed by members of the sororities.

Declamation winner Beverly Botelho is congratulated by Declamation Chairman, Barbara Farrell.

Winner of the Sorority Sing was Kappa Alpha Theta.

Second place went to Chi Omega.

Third place honors went to Sigma Sigma Sigma.

Pi Beta Phi Supports Rural School In Gatlinburg, Tennessee

THE years have been good to the Pi Phi's, bringing many changes and adding new responsibilities, but the ideals and high standards on which the chapter was founded still remain intact. The sisters are proud of the fact that Pi Phi was the first national fraternity for women and that through their efforts, the fraternity is able to maintain and operate a school for rural children in Gatlinburg, Tenn. The growth of the national fraternity attests to the continued strength of its appeal to college women.

It was a busy year for the Pi Phi's, for they had and will continue to have much to live up to. They have always represented in campus activities, and this year was no exception.

Sigma Delta Tau Has New Campus Advisor, Mary Troxell

THROUGHOUT the past nineteen years, Psi sisters have achieved much for the house, and on the University campus.

To make sure that this tradition continues, SDT entered this year's formal rush period with vigor, and came out with a wonderful, if mischievous, pledge class.

Homecoming was about the most hectic weekend of the year. The grads arrived just in time to watch the big, 'fuchsia' elephant getting scalped by overhanging branches in the float parade.

The sisters were very happy to hear that Mrs. Mary Troxell of the Home Economics School will be our new advisor. The sisters spent an enjoyable evening discussing University affairs with President and Mrs. Lederle, and discussing European travel with the Bracketts.

Although the year's activities were fun and worthwhile, the most valuable experience for the sisters was getting to know each other a little better.

Sigma Kappa Wins The Coveted First Place In Homecoming Parade

SIGMA Kappa Sorority was founded at Colby College, Waterville, Maine in 1874. Since then, it has grown in size to a force of 100 chapters scattered all over the United States with an active and alumnae membership of over 36,000.

Sigma Kappa has enjoyed a very successful year, including first prize in the Homecoming Float Parade, a tie for third place in the Sorority Declamation and a rewarding rush season.

Central to the chapter's future plans for the 1963-64 school year is its pledge program which includes Mother-Daughter activities, Pledge Party, Pledge Picnic, all culminating in Initiation and Initiation Banquet. Looking even more to the future, they are beginning to dream and plan for the eventual building of larger and more modern living quarters for Sigma Kappa.

Sigma Sigma Sigma Makes The Mc Cune House Their Home

HAVING been installed as Gamma Iota Chapter in March, 1963, it was an excited group of plans for decorating the McCune house which was to be theirs for the year. A group project made light work of cleaning and painting the rest of the house. A tea was held in honor of the housemother, Mrs. Alice Drake.

Housing facilities for 24 members were provided at the chapter house. Dining accommodations were such that all of sisters and pledges were able to eat at the house. The sisters also enjoyed several exchange suppers during the year.

Scholastically, the Sigma's placed second among the sororities. Also, rush is not something to be overlooked this year. How easy it was to decorate for and hold parties in a house of their own. The new pledges make a fine addition and insure a strong start on next year. The Tri Sigmas were also active participants in all campus events. Plans are also being formulated for a new house which will hopefully be occupied by 1965.

One Dies, One Born For IFC

IFC under President Steve Gray moved decisively to cope with problems that have long plagued the Greek system at the University.

To bolster ranks thinned to a little over 20 percent of the campus population, a first semester rush period was authorized with no rush rules imposed. With the new program went an emphasis on scholastic achievement aimed at keeping promising rushees at the necessary academic level for pledging, thus cutting the rate of pledge attrition.

The feeling of IFC was that pressure on the freshman prospect would be lessened, and both frosh and brothers could get to know each other on a freer basis.

About the same time, IFC witnessed the passing of Sigma Alpha Epsilon, for 29 years a fraternity at UMass, when the SAE charter, under directions from SAE national was revoked.

Known as "The Home of Champions" here, SAE housed some of the University's finest athletes up to the very day of death.

Toward the end of the first semester, however, IFC sired a new member of the family, Sammy, known officially as Sigma Alpha Mu.

“Sammy” Colonizes At UMass

In line with the Interfraternity Council's planned integration of new fraternities at the University, seven undergraduates this year obtained colonization rights with Sigma Alpha Mu national fraternity.

The IFC granted colonization rights to Kenneth Berk, Leslie Eisler, Stephen Gordon, Joel Hartstone, Barry Rosenberg, Thomas Winstanley and Richard Zlete on January 8, 1964.

Four days later the executive secretary of Sigma Alpha Mu was on campus to pledge the colony.

The founding brothers had first joined in October, 1963, as the Sigma Alpha club, with hopes of affiliating with SAM national. After a series of meetings with the University administration, the IFC, and the national officers of the fraternity, the petition for colonization was presented.

The colony expects to receive its official charter and become a fully authorized chapter of Sammy during the 1964-65 school year. The brotherhood also has hopes of living in their own house as of September, 1964.

Sigma Alpha Mu National was founded at the City College of New York in 1909, and has continued to grow until it is now among the country's top ten fraternities. Among its famous brothers are Allan Sherman of recording fame, and Charles Goren, international bridge authority.

Although the UMass chapter will be only the second in New England (the other is at Massachusetts Institute of Technology), it will bring to 54, the number of chapters in the country.

IN December, 1933, Alpha Epsilon Pi was founded on the University of Massachusetts campus. Since that time, the brothers of AEPi have compiled an enviable record on campus.

The brothers held a Christmas Party for underprivileged children, enjoyed many exchange parties and weekend parties, and held their annual pledge formal and Mother's Day Banquet in the spring.

As usual, AEPi, was well represented on campus with brothers on the staffs of the Collegian and Index and with others on Adelpia, Ceasura, WMUA, University Theater, and Student Union Committees. Phi Chapter is especially proud of having won the IFC award for scholarship last year.

In short, Phi Chapter of Alpha Epsilon Pi fraternity has come a long way from the original handful of students to a large fraternity constantly in the spotlight as a source of campus leaders.

FOR the fall semester, Alpha Sig was the house without a house, but a house was rented for second semester. The new quarter of a million dollar house will be located on the same lot at 394 North Pleasant Street. The social area will cover more square feet than did the entire first level of the old house. Living quarters for 46 men will be located in a separate wing to minimize study disturbances.

The absence of a house did not, however, impair the social program. Many off-campus parties were held. Alpha Sig also extends appreciation to Theta Chi, Phi Mu Delta, Tau Epsilon Phi, and Zeta Nu who invited them to share their social areas.

Alpha Sigma Phi, the oldest national on campus, was founded in 1845 at Yale University. In 1913 the charter for Gamma Chapter was granted to UMass.

Alpha Tau Gamma ----

A Two Year Fraternity

ALPHA Tau Gamma was founded on January 19, 1920 as a two-year social fraternity, with membership open to all Stockbridge School of Agriculture students of the University of Massachusetts.

The brothers of ATG have made their presence felt by filling many worthy positions within the activities of the Stockbridge School. Members fill many important positions in sports, student government, and Stoso, the Stockbridge Service Organization.

Our social season was studded with parties and exchange suppers, and climaxed with the annual pledge formal held in March.

This year we have a new housemother, Mrs. Lillian Whitsitt and we all hope that she will be a permanent resident for many years to come.

As we go our separate ways from the University of Massachusetts and Alpha Tau Gamma into the vast and rapidly progressing world, we will always remember, our brothers, our standards, our ideals, our motto, and our Alma Mater.

THIS year has been one of the most successful for the Beta Kappa Phi's. The brothers returned from summer recess to find that they had purchased the adjacent property on Phillips St. This addition greatly increased facilities for 'living in' and is a major step in the future building program.

Physical improvements made in the house include further renovations of our now famous Gobie Lounge, and another Annual Lawn Planting Party.

We were proud to present our largest Alumni turnout on Homecoming Weekend with a First Place in float competition.

From an academic viewpoint they have initiated a program of having faculty guests visit the house. The hope is that we can strengthen the student-teacher relationship and acquaint the faculty and the brothers with the feeling and problems that each have.

Kappa Sigma's Ranks Include Two-Third Varsity Majority

GAMMA Delta Chapter of Kappa Sigma, one of the University's largest fraternities is currently enjoying its 61st year on campus.

This year, in the field of athletics, approximately two-thirds of the house participates in varsity sports. Kappa Sigs made up the bulk of this year's Yan-Con championship football team. Seven Kappa Sigs earned starting positions on the Varsity football team. Kappa Sigs also captained the hockey, basketball, baseball, lacrosse, and tennis teams.

Guest dinners were initiated at the house this year. The purpose of this being to establish a closer relationship between the fraternity and the University.

Community service is also important at Kappa Sig. This year two brothers coached the Amherst Pee Wee hockey team.

This summer the Chapter house, now 24 years old, will be completely renovated.

At Kappa Sig being first is a tradition.

Varsity sports participants are proud of affiliation.

Lambda Chi Alpha Burns Mortgage And Plans New Quarters

Λ X A

GAMMA Zeta Chapter of Lambda Chi Alpha was founded here in 1912 and is now one of 150 active chapters throughout the United States. Last year, the fiftieth anniversary of Gamma Zeta, one of the goals of the founders and house purchasers was realized; the burning of our mortgage. Present at this ceremony was Murray D. Lincoln, most distinguished alumnus, and, at present, president of CARE.

On campus, Lambda Chi's are active in most Recognized Student Organizations such as Maroon Keys (President), Sigma Delta Psi (President), Eta Kappa Nu and Tau Beta Pi. Our future plans include the construction of a new brick house to blend with the increased building program of the University. Thus, as in the past, Lambda Chi Alpha moves forward, building leaders of men.

NU Zeta Chapter of Phi Mu Delta was established on this campus in October of 1953. At present there are eleven chapters located in New England and the northeastern part of the country.

As the University expands and builds, so must the fraternity system on this campus if it hopes to maintain the service it has given to the campus in previous years. In keeping with this policy, Phi Mu Delta is proud to announce that plans are underway to build a new and much larger house within the next year and a half. By doing so, they will increase the capacity of the fraternity thereby allowing more brothers the opportunity to live in the fraternity house. They will be in keeping with the standards of the University in enlarging to meet the growing demands of students. They are very pleased that they can reflect the growth of the University.

Phi Sigma Delta Places Second In Fraternity Scholarship

SINCE 1957, when Phi Sigma Delta was founded on this campus as a national fraternity, they have seen nothing but progress. In six short years we have tripled our membership to 51. Under the able leadership of our president, Robert Keene, 1964 has been a banner year. Academically they placed second in scholarship with a solid 2.3 cumulative average.

Even our housemother, Mrs. Dorothy Pyle, found success in 1963 when her collie, Snake, completed her championship.

Under the early IFC rushing program were added 17 new pledges. These pledges have proven to be quite a spirited and united group, traveling to New England chapters.

Financially the house is supporting itself soundly and the brotherhood has made plans with national for the construction of a new house within three years.

FMA Expands Greeks' Dollar for

FRATERNITY Managers Association is the cooperative buying association for UMass fraternities and sororities. FMA is headed by a joint student-faculty Board of Directors.

Fraternities send two representatives to the annual or special meetings of the House of Delegates. The Board of Directors approves contracts of the fraternity suppliers.

Food, house supplies, physical maintenance equipment and fuel are purchased on the cooperative plan, using the Greeks' combined buying volume to purchase goods at a much lower cost than the retail market could provide.

The FMA is operated by Mr. George Rodgers, Fraternity Manager. Mr. Rodgers has established numerous varied services in the FMA in addition to central buying. Billing systems, which are especially designed for this campus, a central collection agency for student payments, financial advice to chapter treasurers, menu planning information, references and recommendations for cooks and housemothers, advice on the completion of state and local tax forms, and information on the establishment and availability of house corporations and new or remodeled housing are available through the fraternity manager.

The success of FMA on this campus has been noted on college campuses across the nation. Most campuses have seen the benefits that may be derived from the cooperative buying system, and UMass has become the model for these systems.

Mr. Rodgers has been called to advise fraternity men and their advisers in the formation of similar organizations.

At the National Interfraternity Conference meeting held recently, Mr. Rodgers was asked to outline plans for several schools. He was invited to other campuses to direct the initiation of cooperative buying.

Phi Sigma Kappa Is The Sole National Alpha Chapter at UMass

Φ Σ K

The Christmas party holds pleasures for all.

PHI Sigma Kappa, founded in 1873 at the University of Massachusetts, still remains as the only Alpha Chapter on campus. Steeped in the tradition of its founders, the chapter excels in the cardinal principles on which it was founded.

The chapter is a part of one of the nation's largest national fraternities with 73 chapters across the country.

Phi Sigma Kappa pledges have the cherished opportunity to view college life as well as fraternity life from the best possible perspective and this life gives them that needed boost to attain the academic achievement that they desire.

The fraternity chapter will boast of its achievements during the year, but its real advancement lies in the opportunity it gives to the entering freshman to acquaint himself with the ever present social aspects of real life and the opportunity to see for himself who and what he is.

Q.T.V. Has Building Fund Program Well Underway

QT.V. is the oldest Latin local fraternity in the country, founded on this campus on May 12, 1869. It is also the first fraternity to be established on this campus, and a plaque on South College commemorates its founding.

Q.T.V.'s most outstanding attribute is the diversity of personalities and interests among the brethren, while still maintaining a close feeling of brotherhood.

Due to the growing needs of the fraternity a building fund has been created for a new house. Directed by both alumni and active members, the present plan calls for the new building to be built on the present site.

Add all things together: the heritage and tradition of the house, the diversity of the brethren and you have it, Q.T.V., a closely knit group of men living together in the true spirit of fraternal brotherhood.

Mrs. Chapel is Welcomed As Housemother By Sigma Phi Epsilon

Serious thought goes into each competitive event.

Σ Φ Ε

THE Mass Alpha Chapter of Sigma Phi Epsilon is now in its fifty-second year on campus, and is very happy to have a new housemother, Mrs. Chapel.

Again this year as in the past the Sig Ep football team was able to take first place in its league. The basketball team which won the IFC championship last year, is looking forward to a repeat performance this year.

Of the many social events during the year, truly the Christmas party for the retarded patients of Northampton State Hospital was one of the most enjoyable and rewarding.

The Sig Eps are well represented on campus this year in many organizations. With such a background to rely on, Sig Eps look forward to many productive years to come.

Tau Epsilon Phi Structure Houses Most Of The Membership

T E Φ

TAU Pi Chapter of Tau Epsilon Phi was founded on this campus in 1938. Our new structure enables us to feed all, and house most of the brotherhood. The national fraternity has 68 chapters which are distributed throughout Canada and the continental United States from coast to coast and border to border.

The house as a unit is also active on campus. We hope to improve our standing this year by again placing in athletic competition, and also by having our pledges achieve a high scholastic average, being aided by an accelerated study program.

Socially, thus far, this year has been very successful, having exchange parties with other fraternities and sororities. Everyone enjoyed the Christmas Party, which together with the sisters of Chi Omega, we sponsored for local orphan children. We anxiously view the rest of the year with scholastic, social and athletic success in mind.

LAST year was a triumphant one for TKE. First place finishes in the Homecoming Float Parade, Greek Weekend, softball and swimming, plus a second in the IFC Sing, and a third place in the Winter Carni Snow Sculpture added to a first place finish in over-all IFC competition. With the championship trophy secured, the enthusiasm of the brothers overflowed. Although expectations of returning to a new house this year were abruptly ended when minor problems delayed the proposed construction, the brotherhood showed its usual fine spirit in repairing and redecorating the existing structure. Thus, 401 North Pleasant retained the familiar gray house on the hill—a house which saw another fine year in social, academic and competitive pursuits. As always, Tekes were found active in the Student Senate, WMUA, Collegian, Cheerleaders, Band, ROTC, varsity basketball, football, gymnastics and class activities.

Memory Of Molly Doering

Becomes Part Of Theta Chi Spirit

THETA Chi Fraternity, founded nationally at Norwich University in 1856, was established on the campus of the University of Massachusetts in 1911 and has occupied its present structure on North Pleasant Street since 1935.

Always among the leaders on campus, in 1951 Theta Chi introduced a new idea to the University fraternity system, that of a resident hostess, or housemother. At that time, Mrs. Mary C. Doering, or Molly as she was known to the brothers, became the first fraternity resident hostess for the growing University.

Early in 1964, Mrs. Doering passed away, and with her death the campus community, the fraternity system, and especially Theta Chi lost a truly close friend.

Her loss is immeasurable, but so too are the benefits gained from having known her. Her unselfish devotion to Theta Chapter of Theta Chi is a virtue more worthy of emulation, and as the brothers try to do so, the memory of Molly Doering will always be with the brothers of Theta Chi.

THE story of Zeta Nu has been one of development. Born in 1961, she has since grown into a leading house on campus. In September, 1962, after a long, hard battle, the Brothers of Zeta Nu were able to acquire a house that fulfilled all the needs of a fraternity. Since then the keyword at ZN has been progress.

Dedicated 'to augment the existing fellowship among members . . . regardless of race, creed or color,' ZN has become a fraternity of widely diversified interests which become compatible in the fraternal atmosphere.

Since its founding on the campus less than two years ago, Zeta Nu has reason to be proud of its leadership and accomplishments. Zeta Nu was founded on high ideals and we will continue to uphold these ideals in all phases of fraternal life.

IFC Initiates First Semester

Greeks adopted first semester rushing on a trial basis. It proved successful and has been accepted as standard rush period.

Rushing As Aid To Freshmen Pledges

Brothers at Phi Sigma Kappa greet would-be pledges. Brothers found rush period a grind.

FOR the academic year, 1963-64, the Interfraternity Council instituted an early rushing program.

The program was on an experimental basis this year but success warranted its continued practice, and the IFC has adopted the early Fall as the permanent date for formal rushing.

The system was adopted for many reasons. In past, rushing was held in the Spring semester so that freshmen could establish a minimum grade point average in their first semester. Under the new system, the IFC felt that freshmen grades could be favorably improved if the incoming freshmen, as pledges, could receive guidance from upperclassmen in the houses.

The fraternity group of 50 or 60 men, it was felt, could give more personal attention to the freshmen than could be provided in the larger dormitory group.

Fraternity presidents, and the sophomore and junior IFC representatives formed plans to strengthen the big brother-little brother systems in individual houses, to further provide personal attention for freshmen.

Sig Ep's Alumni Room, Phi Sig's kitchen.

Study Hall Requirements

IN conjunction with first semester rushing, the IFC established minimum study hall requirements for all pledges for the 1963-1964 academic year.

Supervised study halls were required by each house for all pledges. The fraternities used rooms in Machmer Hall made available by the administration, or held the study sessions in the house, in the study hall or big brother-little brother systems. The IFC scholarship chairman and his committee regularly reported to the IFC and made suggestions to the several houses that could improve the study halls.

Some of the houses merely augmented existing study programs, while others established their first formal study programs this year. The pledge class averages in the fraternities reflect the value of these study halls.

The system now has more members than ever before. The minimum average requirement for pledging was not applied to freshmen this year. However, the minimum requirement was applied to initiation for freshmen.

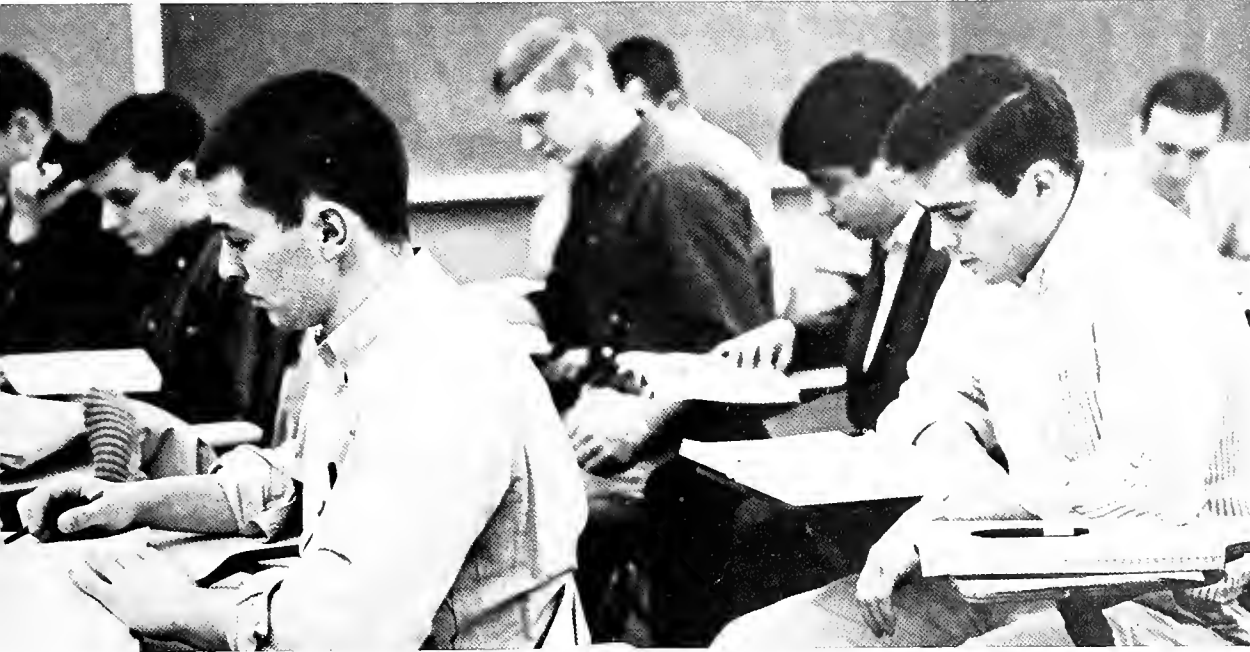

Many of the houses established requirements far above the IFC minimums. The success of these houses was higher than those fraternities following only minimum requirements, and the all-house average was increased accordingly.

For the next year, the IFC, through the scholarship committee, is providing member fraternities with suggested study hall plans which can be applied to the specific fraternity.

The success of the study hall program has, it is felt, made all the fraternities aware of the benefits which a well planned scholarship program can provide and the fraternities have taken the responsibility individually.

It is expected that the new emphasis on academic achievement in the fraternity system will provide an even higher all-fraternity average, especially among freshmen pledges.

Boost House Averages, Aids Pledges

Brothers of QTV use Machmer Hall facilities donated by the University for study purposes.

IFC has established a blood bank at the Cooley Dickinson hospital, Northampton, through donations from members of the UMass fraternities.

The goal is to have 400 pints of blood, on a yearly renewable rotation, on reserve.

The blood is donated in the name of the IFC rather than the name of the donor. While most blood bank plans insure the donor and his immediate family for a year, the blood donated by the fraternity system will be available to all through any IFC member.

The bank was established especially for University students, faculty, staff and employees and their families, and the town of Amherst. IFC felt that the blood should always be on hand, for those people who gave to the Campus Blood drive, as well as those who were unable to give, thus alleviating the costly replacement of blood.

The rotational plan was adopted to insure an adequate supply of blood constantly on hand.

Rolls Up Sleeves For Blood Donations

When plan goes to full operation, Greeks will give weekly.

Brothers of Phi Sigma Kappa were first to donate to new program.

Blood will be made available to any at University or the town.

Greeks Tout Tots At Yule

AT Christmas time, Campus fraternities and sororities extend the spirit of Christmas to hundreds of underprivileged children in the Amherst area. It is the season of Christmas parties with gayly lighted Christmas trees, colorfully wrapped gifts and a "good old" Saint Nick in every fraternity.

The children are brought to fraternity houses where they are greeted by the festive Greeks. Santa arrives with a myriad of gifts from pick-up-sticks and mechanical robots to fire engines and dolls. The tots plow through mounds of ice cream and cookies while enjoying their favorite cartoons, and finally leave with their arms stuffed with gifts and their hearts filled with laughter.

Theme Party Night

SORORITY theme parties represent a decisive point in feminine Greek circles. At the theme party, sisters and likely pledges gather at the close of rushing period for a final fun fling before bids are offered.

Themes are demanding on all involved since costuming is generally elaborate, and those rooms of the house to be used by the group are fully decorated to conform to the theme.

Magic Transforms Houses

ONCE a successful theme is hit upon, the house managing the production stays with it. SDT's Arabian Nights has become an annual affair, drawing on the exotic tales of Araby as a background suggesting the searing passion of the sand.

In a brief two years on campus, Sigma Sigma Sigma has established its theme upon Robert Lewis Carroll's Alice In Wonderland complete with Mad Hatters, Magic Mushrooms and Queens.

A seven-point Fraternity Code developed by the Fraternity Presidents came into being as a means "to establish worthwhile goals, and to strengthen the fraternity ideal."

The code was adopted after a poll of fraternity members that sought to determine those points considered by Greeks to be of use in strengthening the system.

Fraternity Presidents gathered the information and formulated the seven points that were in turn accepted by all the houses.

Fraternities pledged themselves to greater cooperation among the several houses, thus inhibiting divisive actions without lessening competition among the houses.

As "an institution dedicated to the pursuit of higher learning," the Greeks also determined to create "an atmosphere conducive to academic excellence." For some time the fraternity system has been underfire for a purported lack of intellectual interest.

Another point called for the expansion of the present scope of social activities to include "a more active part in University sponsored events and local community projects." Greeks also pledged a diversity of "social opportunities" to benefit members in future.

Recognition of leadership potential among members was urged to encourage lifelong responsibility in members.

Greeks also agreed to "promote interaction between fraternities and all other members of the University community."

They further urged the "importance of the development of scholarship and character and the promotion of a sense of brotherhood toward all men."

They also pledged "through greater participation and dedication" to "combat the evils of apathy and negligence so prevalent in all formal organizations."

The code was accepted early in the second semester as a guide line for Greek purposes. The code was distributed to all members by the Inter Fraternity Council.

These Results, Among Others . . .

WORDS by Senate President Jon Fife at the first Senate meeting of the second semester apparently were effective.

For, based on first semester observations, the Student Senate resembled early-century Tammany Hall.

But student opinion prompted Senators to take stock, and President Fife called upon the Senate to broaden its scope for greater effectiveness.

The legislators subsequently approved subsidizing buses to take students to UMass' College Bowl matches in New York.

Sens. James Watson and Marilyn Singer (foreground) whose walkout precipitated spree of resignations.

WHEN the Conflict of Interest bill authored by Senators McNamara and Mathieson was set to be voted on by the Senate, all appeared serene—till parliamentary juggling began.

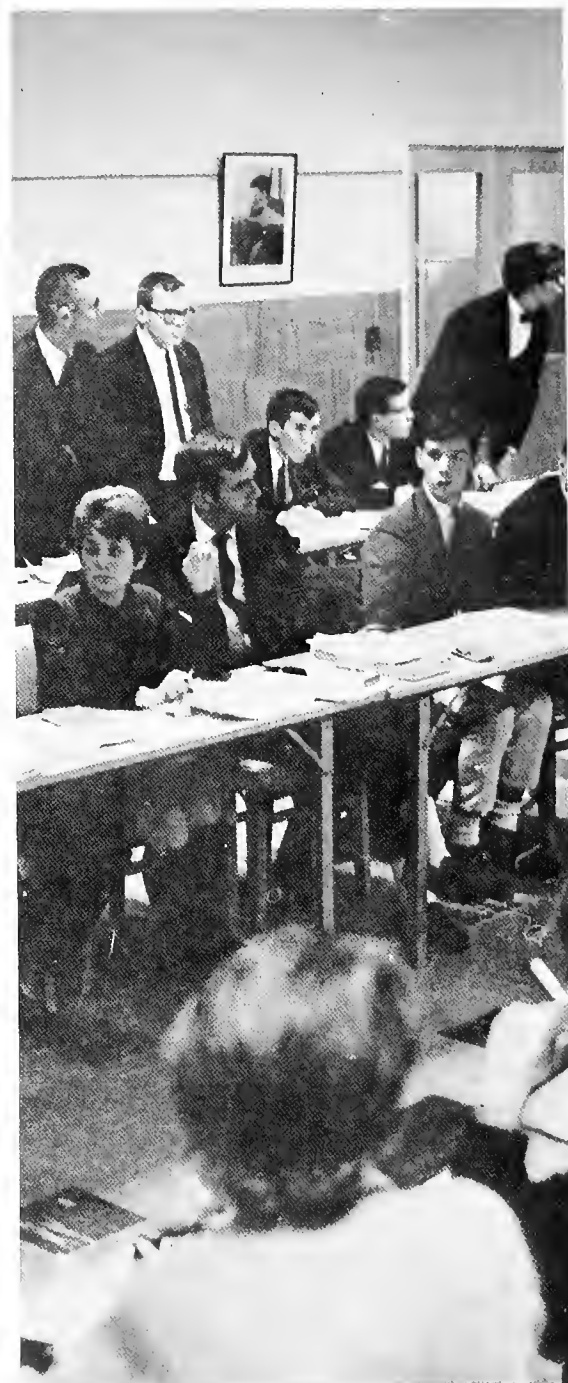

The bill, vigorously opposed by Senators Singer and Watson as chairmen respectively of Women's and Men's Affairs, seemed unable to gather votes for enactment.

The co-authors then moved for reconsideration, attempting to table the bill and save it from certain defeat.

At this point Watson and Singer rose to leave, thus ending the quorum. Senate President Fife ordered them to their seats. They failed to comply.

By this time, the entire campus was aware of Senate doings, if not well informed. Letters poured into the Collegian and WMUA decided to broadcast Senate deliberations live for the first time in three years. Thus the stage was set for the next play.

Parliamentary Gambits Cause Floor Fireworks

Sens. McNamara and Mathieson rise on points of order following Singer's apology.

Senate Treasurer Ross Jones declares his resignation to gain the floor to comment on Singer's apology. A subsequent censure motion against Jones failed.

THE next weekly meeting of the Senate was slated to bring an apology from Watson and Singer and final action on the conflict bill.

The apology read by Senator Singer was immediately objected to by Mathieson, who resigned his Services chairmanship. Jones then rose to deliver his resignation as Treasurer. Singer then moved to censure herself.

Censure motions became the topic of discussion, and Senate Treasurer Ross Jones became the target.

Jones was charged with "using his resignation as a ruse to gain possession of the floor." The executive council had rejected Jones' resignation.

The vote came on. Three ballots were called for before a definite vote could be tallied. In the end, the censure motion failed to carry and Jones returned to his position.

Collegian editorials and student letters reflected harsh campus feelings against the Senate in general. But the early eruption tended to recede.

Class of '67 Explodes in Size, Efficiency and Enthusiasm

WHEN the Class of '67 entered the University this fall, records of all kinds were broken.

Besides being the largest class ever enrolled at UMass, the freshmen had the distinct honor of wearing their beanies longer than any previous class. Despite the energy loss because of this beanie toting, the class bounced back with traditional Freshman spirit in a furious election campaign of class officers.

With Dave Cummings as their president and an enthusiastic executive council, the Class of 1967 organized the Christmas Carol Sing, constructed the Toboggan Run, which was one of the highlights of the Winter Carnival festivities, and celebrated their first year of growing with the University at the annual Freshman picnic.

Sophomore Class Travels Through Activities

ACCORDING to tradition, the Class of 1966 settled down to the serious business accompanying the appellation "sophomore" after a light-hearted year as freshmen. Early in the year, the sophomores honored the incoming freshmen at a post-football game picnic. Then there was the night they brought Las Vegas to the UMass campus.

Under the direction of Bernie Dallas and his gambling class officers and Executive Council, the Ballroom was turned into a genuine casino with all the trimmings. The UMass community enjoyed an unforgettable evening at the gambling tables.

Next on the Sophomore's busy schedule was the Soph Banquet, which this year traveled back through the ages to be presented as a "Roman Affair." Now the Class of '66 can look forward to two more years of growing with the University.

Juniors Produce Snowless Winter Carni

DESPITE the lack of cooperation from Old Man Winter, the Junior Class managed to present its version of the 1964 Winter Carnival "All the World's a Stage" in true University tradition commemorating Shakespeare's tetracential.

Although the annual snow sculpture, one of the most popular events, which attracts thousands of visitors to campus, had to be cancelled because of lack of snow, the class officers' and the Executive Council's planning was not in vain. They were well rewarded by a well attended fashion show, the dreamy dancing to the music of Lester Lanin at the Carnival Ball, and the fun filled evening listening to the New Christie Minstrels Concert.

The spirited energy which pervaded all their undertakings is expected to serve the class well when they take over the reins of the senior class next year.

Judiciaries Serve As Highest Courts On Campus

UNDER the Constitution of the Student Senate, a General Court is provided for. The Court is divided into the Men's Judiciary and the Women's Judiciary. The purpose of the Judiciaries is to determine the constitutionality of any bills adopted by the Student Senate if a complaint is made by more than ten undergraduates. They also hear cases of individuals referred to them by the dormitories and impose suitable penalties. If any student refuses to appear, he is held in contempt of court and is dealt with appropriately.

The Men's Judiciary is made up of three seniors, three juniors and one sophomore while the Women's Judiciary consists of two seniors, two juniors and one sophomore. Members of Women's Judiciary are elected by a general vote of all the women on campus. Justices of Men's Judiciary are selected by the present justices and an equal number of male senators.

Two Area Judiciaries work in conjunction with Men's Judiciary as associate justices who preside over minor offenses.

Dorm Residents Secure Increased Representation Through Interdorm Council

1963-64 sees Women's Interdorm Council closer to their goal of bringing the women's dorms and their residents to their rightful place on campus through wider representation in campus activities.

For the first time, the Council, consisting of two elected representatives from each of the women's dorms, had a voice in such functions as Campus Chest, John F. Kennedy Memorial, SWAP, Women's Affairs, Student Social Activities Committee and Career Day.

Each year, the Council presents a plaque to one of the women's dorms on the basis of points accumulated through participation and performance in the Interdorm Sing, Float Parade, WAA competition and scholastic rating. Due to weather conditions, the Winter Carnival snow sculptures did not enter into the competition this year.

A special project undertaken by the Council was the revision of the University etiquette booklet, "Cues," which is to be distributed next year. Through their candy sale, they donated $80 to U.N. Week and later in the year, a contribution was made to Campus Chest from their treasury

Adelphia Programs Benefit University

Adelphians serve as escorts for Homecoming Queens: Judy Sturtevant with Bruce Albro; Sandy Pierce with Dave Clancy.

A number of state-wide high schools that might have missed first hand information about the University benefited from the Adelphia slide program designed to acquaint high school students with UMass.

Adelphians also continued in their usual committee roles with the Fine Arts Council, RSO, Calendar coordinating Board and the Student Union Governing Board.

Freshman talks, Homecoming activities, football rallies and dances also go under the Adelphian belt.

SCOPE and High School Honors Day still remain as prime projects in the Adelphian commitment to scholastic achievement, as well as extra-curricular leadership.

The Senior men's honor society is chosen from the ranks of outstanding juniors and seniors each Spring.

Mortarboard Serves Campus

BASED on the ideals of scholarship, leadership and service, Mortar Board at the University of Massachusetts strives to provide outlets for the abilities of its members by active participation in worthwhile campus programs.

At UMass this national senior women's honor society has certain projects which are undertaken each year. As an introduction to the University, Mortar Board publishes a booklet of helpful hints for the incoming coeds, and in conjunction with Adelpia, its members give talks to all the freshman women on the topic, "A Chance for Maturity." In their monthly Collegian editorial, "Mortar Board Speaks Out," the group investigated and discussed controversial campus issues.

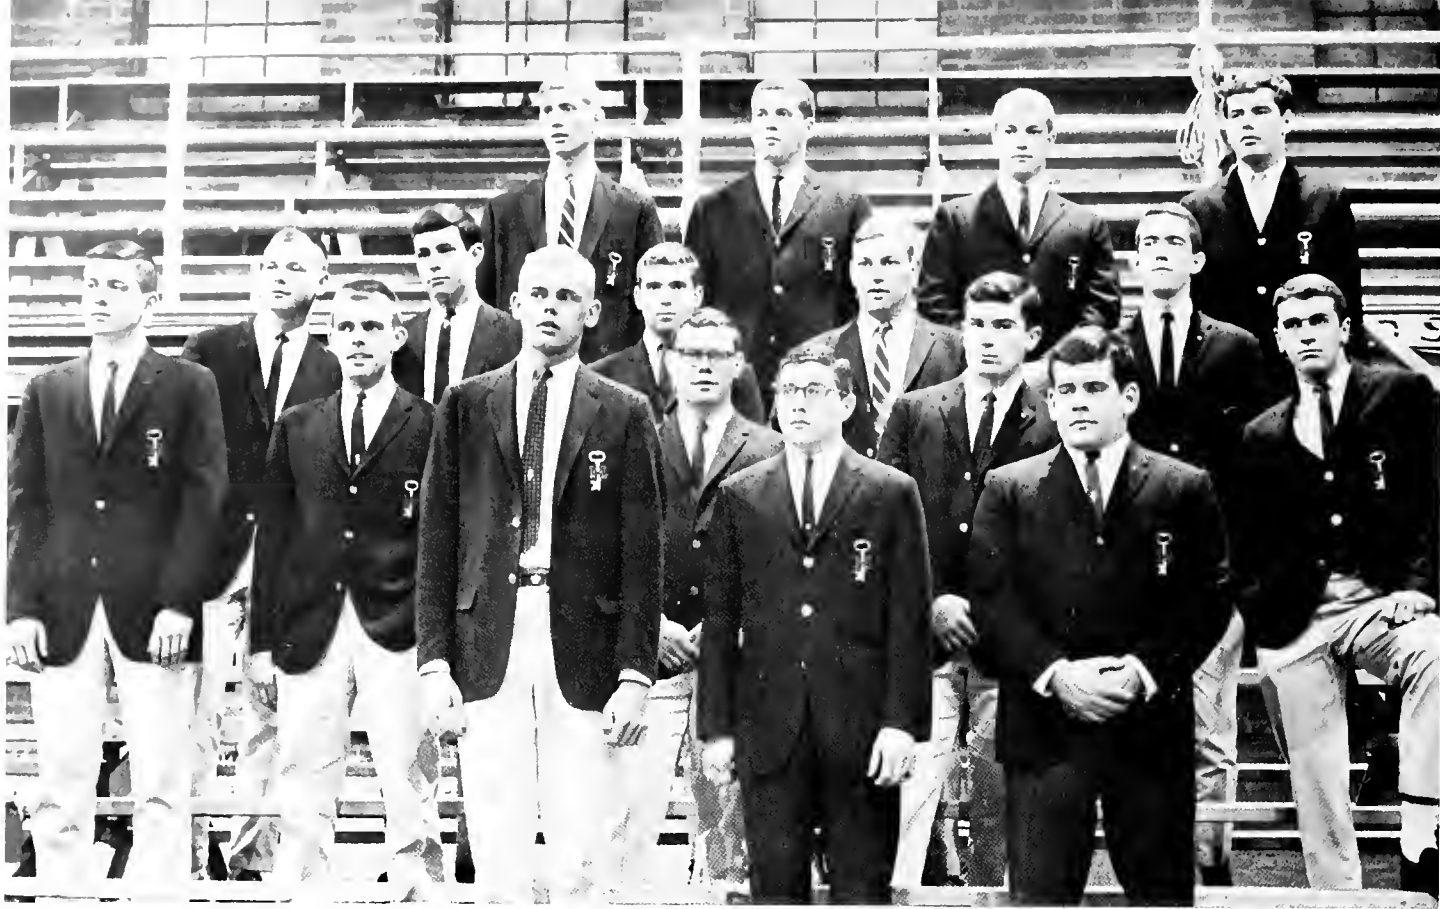

A major part of its work this year was involved in a study of the campus needs of foreign students which led to participation in weekly foreign student teas; encouraged dormitories, fraternities, and sororities to invite foreign students as guests; and initiated a drive for bedspreads, curtains and various other student housing articles much needed by the foreign students. Mortar Board also investigated the possibilities of a "People-to-People" Program for the University.

Through this challenging and rewarding program, Mortar Board attempts to strengthen the school and to give its members a sense of personal accomplishment of the group's goals.

Key's Make First Impression On Visitors

AS sophomore men's honorary service organization on campus, the Maroon Key consists of twenty-five men selected from the freshman class for their potential leadership qualities as well as spirit shown in their first year at the University.

During freshman week, the Keys work with the Scrolls in freshman orientation, welcoming the Frosh to campus and infecting them with some of the enthusiasm for which the keys are noted.

Visiting athletic teams get their first impression of UMass from the Maroon Keys, when they act as hosts for the Redmen's competition at all home games. In this capacity the Keys are responsible for making a visitor's first impression a good one.

Also, these sophomores stand ready to act on all occasions when their services are necessary, and to work in all areas of campus life willingly and attentively.

Building bonfires, participation in rallies, and sponsoring dances are typical Key activities. This year the group presented $250 in scholarships at Student Leaders Night, was responsible for the publicity of the Sophomore Banquet and, as its contribution to the Campus Chest drive, collected donations from the local merchants.

Not content with these diverse activities, the Keys managed to finish up all the old business of the previous year, usher for various D.V.P. functions, and donate blood for the use of any needy UMass student at Cooley-Dickson Hospital.

Through continued service to the University, the Maroon Keys fulfill their purpose of recognizing men of leadership and scholarship and providing an outlet through which sophomore men can use and develop their potential.

Scrolls Work for a Close-Knit Campus Community

COMMUTERS have found themselves a more integral part of the University through the efforts of the Scrolls, the sophomore women's honorary society, after the usual Big-Little Sister program was enlarged to encompass the commuting element of the University campus. Last April saw the tapping of Susan and Sarah Eustace, the first commuters to become Scrolls in the organization's 19 year history.

Helping the freshmen to adjust to their new environment is one of the Scroll's main objectives. A representative spoke to the Class of '67 at their orientation program followed by the sale of beanies in conjunction with the Maroon Keys upon the freshmen's arrival at their respective dorms. The Soph-Frosh picnic found Scrolls serving food and mixing with the Frosh to encourage class spirit.

Within the sophomore class, their sales ability was proven. In December, a Scroll cookie sale was held in the Union, the proceeds to benefit a student they designated to receive a scholarship. Tickets to the Romanus Dies Festus, the sophomore banquet, were sold in the dorms as a part of their service campaign.

Revelers Goad

Campus Spirit

BRIGHT red and white striped jackets, an abundance of energy and enthusiasm, and a willingness to work characterize the Revelers, the only UMass honorary society composed of men and women from all classes.

Throughout the football season, Revelers roused students out of dorms, distributed UMass song sheets, and at halftime performances, they filled in the formations and held props for the marching band routines.

Fun and scholarships were provided by a Friday night Hootenanny; and as their working contribution to the Campus Chest, Revelers were responsible for the Miss Campus Chest Contest.

After last year's off-campus production, Campus Varieties returned to Bowker's stage. As one of Reveler's biggest projects, the May show was the result of a valiant cooperative effort.

APO Aids Art Fund

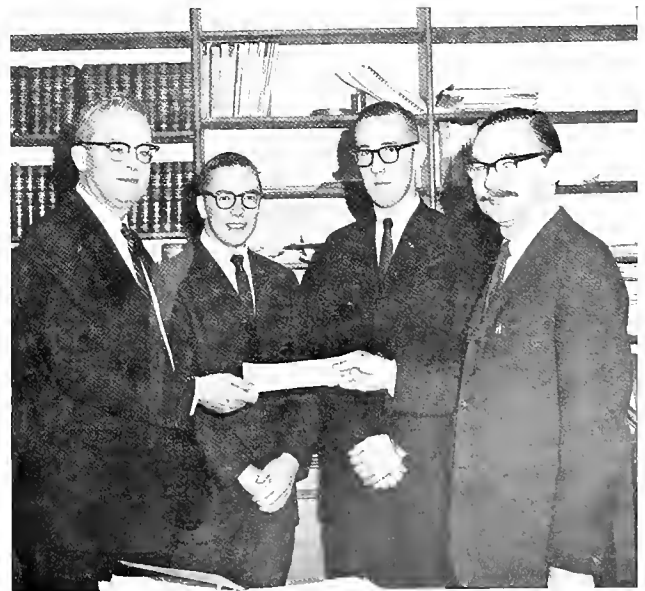

KAPPA Omicron, the UMass chapter of Alpha Phi Omega, the National Men's Service Fraternity, completed a year marked by projects valuable to the campus at large.

Beginning the year in fine style, A.P.O. presented a profitable Registration Dance that provided funds for scholarships and loans. Their non-profit Book Exchange at the start of each semester held in conjunction with Gamma Sigma Sigma is a valuable service to the students. For inessential members of the student body, A.P.O. had two concrete benches added to the south side of the Union terrace.

The Dave Brubeck Concert during Homecoming Weekend presented by A.P.O. served to raise money for the Art Acquisition Fund, which purchases works of art for the University.

Through the efforts of its members and the support of the student population, A.P.O. continues to serve the UMass community.

GSS Supports African School Project

UNDER the guidance of Dean Purvis of the School of Education, Gamma Sigma Sigma has undertaken a special two-year project to help in raising the educational standards of a girls' school in Uganda.

Established at the University in June, 1963, campus chapter, Alpha Theta, began as the Women's Service Organization in the Spring of 1961, with the ideals of friendship, service and equality.

Open to all University women interested in service, the organization offers campus benefits through such projects as a Book Exchange at the start of each semester, United Nations Week and the sale of boutonnieres for H.E.R. Weekend dance. Many projects on campus are co-sponsored with A.P.O.

On the social side, the organization holds mixed functions with A.P.O. and has an Annual Banquet in the Spring.

Collegian Joins Ranks Of Forceful Newspapers

Editor-in-Chief Jeffrey S. Davidow.

TWO characteristics of this year's Collegian proved to be stick-to-it-ivity, and follow-through—important characteristics of worthwhile journalism.

Collegian reporters grubbed deeply through the surface of the news to come up with the story of the loss of Japanese architect Minoru Yamasaki as designer for the proposed fine arts building. Collegian reports bluntly indicated that the blame could be shouldered by the State House.

Perhaps the most impressive single effort on the part of the campus journalists was the extra edition published at the assassination of President Kennedy. The Friday edition was being distributed when word of the tragedy flashed through the Student Union.

The printer was alerted to prepare for an extra, and the base of operations was shifted to WMUA's studios where press service wires were available. The extra was complete to the capture of the assassin.

Striving to improve communications between faculty and student body, the editors initiated free distribution of the paper to faculty members. The faculty responded by allowing a reporter to attend a Faculty Senate meeting.

Mounting its crusading charger, the newspaper galloped full tilt into the arena of extra curricular compensation for the officers of WMUA, Index and the Collegian.

Crusade Draws Readers' Eyes

Elwin McNamara, News Editor, checks layout dummies.

STUDENTS reacted swiftly to the front page newstories citing the pros and cons of compensation, and the editorials calling for a Senate feasibility study.

Letters to the editor followed shortly, some charging irresponsibility on the part of the Collegian for espousing the move. Nevertheless, the Senate voted to study the proposal.

By the end of the year the Collegian had established a straight shooting news and editorial policy.

LIKE preferred stock the 1964 Index should become more valuable as the years roll on.

By committing scenes, events and personages to ink and paper, the yearbook attempts to capture the color and flavor of the 1963-64 academic year. When the Index is filed on dusty shelves it should not have ceased to be functional, for when it is removed from those shelves in years to come its function will be renewed.

Toward this end, the re-living of this year, the thousands of words and photographs will become a living entity in themselves, and through the printed matter the year will live again. The students who produced this book bring their individual craftsmanship and creativeness into this production with these purposes in mind.

Thus the Index, in the mellowing years to come, will find its greatest appreciation.

WMUA Installs $10,000 In New Equipment

WMUA offers community entertainment . . .

instruction for student broadcasters . . .

WITH almost $10,000 invested in new equipment, WMUA launched its bid to rank with professional radio stations while maintaining its non-commercial, educational, student-operated personality.

Buckling down to a 96-hour week of educational and entertaining programming, the station acquired three Gates turntables, an Ampex recorder and a Collins control board.

Sounds emanating from this equipment were pushed through the new Collins transmitter, to be received as far north as Bennington, Vt. and over to Westover Air Force Base where Friday night's Crazy Rhythms request show garnered a large audience.

Going along with the power boost in transmission, is a proposed WMUA plan to mount the transmitter atop one of the new seven story dormitories being completed on the hilly northeast corner of campus.

The move is expected to boost transmission radius 15-20 miles.

Beefed Up Programming Includes Public Service

NEW this year to the programming log, is Interaction in which a member of the administration and a student discuss questions phoned in by listeners.

'MUA introduced its own popular record list by determining the top 30 songs among students.

At the time of the assassination of President Kennedy, the station went on the air as soon as word was received to relate the tragedy as it unfolded.

A month earlier WMUA had broadcast the President's remarks at Amherst College's Robert Frost Memorial Library groundbreaking ceremonies.

Important Student Senate meetings also received radio coverage that heightened the impact of the debates through broadcasting's immediacy.

Yahoo Gains National Kudos

OFFERING relief from academic pressure, Yahoo, the campus humor magazine, entertains its readers with light reading and cartoons. Material contributed by the students appears tri-annually satirizing various aspects of campus life.

Now in its tenth year of publication, Yahoo prints over 7000 copies per issue. This year it has become a copyrighted publication registered with the Washington Bureau of Copyrights, and has started including contributions from across the country, a direct result of its appearance in Writer's Digest, a national publication.

Another big step for Yahoo has been the sale of material by staff members to national commercial magazines, including Cavalier.

The name Yahoo, over which there has been much confusion, originally began with an obnoxious and symbolic creature created by Jonathan Swift. Thus it is very appropriate for this composite of humorous stories and laughter provoking parodies of campus life.

Magazine's Activity Belies Name

REQUIEM

By David Axelrod

And we shall build a monument
To honor our war dead;
Piling stone on stone,
Cement and one strong figure,
Armed, atop the inscribed pedestal,
And date it; and flower it
Once each year;
And let the pigeons roost,
So all who pass can say . . . nothing,
Just pass and never notice.

CAESURA technically means "stop or pause," but it far from labels the work of this year's Caesura. Instead, the word "work" started being used when the '63 staff stepped in changing the old name "Literary Magazine," enlivening the cover, and tightening the organization.

The Senate appropriated additional funds when the campaign to refresh Caesura produced budget worries. The Senate added 500 copies and okayed the budget increase.

The '63-'64 staff carried on the new tradition with an avant-garde Pop Art sculpture on the commencement issue's cover. This year's Caesura carried through campus wide publicity campaigns and a series of coffee hours.

The effort made the magazine a loud, clear voice on campus. Winter's issue set a record for student material submitted—over 200 poems and 30 stories.

New Innovations Pave Way For Improved Engineering Journal

IN the seventh year of publication, the Engineering Journal is the only University publication that comes close to self-support. With the added incentives of its new air-conditioned office and several pieces of new equipment, the four issue-a-year Journal has increased its number of pages with the help of the staff and the approval of the engineering department.

This year has seen firsts in many new areas of coverage. In addition to regular articles on scientific developments in the engineering fields, a student innovation section, featuring ideas and inventions of UMass engineers, has been started. The initiation of a critique of Engineering School classes, curriculum and teachers, and the use of multi-color printing supplement the well-established features which include personal profiles of outstanding alumni and a Journal Queen in every issue.

The forward looking Engineering Journal hopes for further growth in circulation and coverage in years to come.

No matter what a student's problem may be, whether it concerns a necessary class average for staying in school or procedures on student marriages, the place to find the answer is the Handbook. If the exact information is not available, the staff, under the direction of John Burke, has compiled enough facts concerning rules, regulations, and activities to at least direct the student to the right office or service to get the answer.

The experienced staff has not maintained status quo but has added many improvements. Through their diligent efforts, the staff has added diverse bits of information on lost and found belongings, scholastic warnings and probation, and Housing Office.

With its efficient cataloging of the myriad facets of campus life, this directory is indispensable to incoming freshmen, upperclassmen, and faculty.

Eight-Concert Program Cost Nearly $20,000

Seated: Chris Olsen, Joan Schoppe, Joann Miller. Standing: Don Crasco, Langdon Lombard, Concert Manager: Don Hayes, Steve Bowman. Missing: Joyce Blum, Bill Price.

SUPPORTED by student tax and under the control of a student executive board, the UMass Concert Association has an obligation to the students to provide them with the finest musical offerings. A budget of $20,000 is appropriated annually through the Senate and RSO to be used for eight concerts.

This program is formulated a year in advance. First the Concert Association selects artists they feel that the students would enjoy. Then the Executive Board checks the dates and prices of each group arriving at a tentative schedule. Next the program with definite dates is sent for approval by the Fine Arts Council and the Senate. The final arrangements are then made with the artists and the calendar office.

The results of these efforts produced the 1963-64 program, with such diversification as an opera, a full-scale ballet, dual pianists, a symphony orchestra, a string quartet, a brass quintet (the only such group in the world), and a chamber music quartet.

Chorale's Band Led By New Director

WITH a new director this year, Dr. John Jensen, the University of Massachusetts Concert Band has worked up to a new level of quality. Approximately fifty musicians went on a four day tour of high schools and service clubs in Massachusetts during the January vacation.

In a joint performance with Chorale, the Concert Band participated in the Fine Arts Festival on March 21 in a Student Union concert. Among the various selections was "Memorial for Concert Band and Organ" an original work by Elliot Schwartz of the Music Department.

By providing an outlet for the talents and energies of the UMass musicians, the Concert Band helps to further and develop musical ability and excellence.

The practice sessions of the Concert Band are responsible for the melodious sounds issuing from Old Chapel.

The 65-voice Chorale provides beautiful music for the University campus.

STRIVING for the performance and appreciation of fine choral music, the University of Massachusetts Chorale gives its members the opportunity to perform for various groups and functions. This year, it presented a wide variety of sacred and secular music including works by Handel, Bartok, Brahms, Hindesmith, and many others.

The first appearance of Chorale on campus was a joint performance with the Concert Band under the direction of John Jensen. In April, their annual spring tour enabled the group to demonstrate their talents to numerous high schools in Massachusetts. Still another opportunity for fine chorale entertainment was provided by their spring concert.

Under the leadership of Larry Lemmel, the group this year has expanded and improved to include sixty-five members who exhibit fine musical ability and a strong interest in promoting worthwhile choral music.

Chorale's Repertoire Includes Sacred, Secular Selections

Musigals Swing Out For UMass

DRESSED in their pink denim ensembles, the Musigals are lovely to look at as well as pleasing to the ear. Originally formed in 1961 for the personal satisfaction of its members, the group now has a real place in UMass musical circles.

Thirteen girls form the nucleus of this hard working group. To achieve their melodious perfection each girl puts in at least four hours of weekly practice along with time for tryouts and special rehearsals. The results of this rigorous routine are seen in their performances at the inter-dorm sing, Winter Carnival, and Christmas festivities.

Evidences of their success were exemplified when they placed second in the national intercollegiate sing at Lycoming College, Williamsport, Pa.

Vocal Variety Keynote Of Statesman

SINGING their way through a busy schedule of both on and off campus performances, the UMass Statesmen did much to promote the musical interests of UMass. This all male vocal group has been in existence since 1939 and has become part of the heritage and tradition of the University.

Complete reorganization expanded the group from eight to twelve members. Their programs are presented at campus functions throughout the year—Homecoming, fraternity Christmas parties, Winter Carnival, the Sorority Sing and Declamation, to mention a few. Not content with these numerous engagements, the Statesmen also regularly sing at various area hospitals and at the Hotel Northampton.

The money earned through these activities is used to pay their expenses, this year's largest outlay going to new sport coats.

The Statesmen have worked to bring UMass a variety of vocal entertainment in the form of ballads, spirituals, contemporary arrangements, and musical comedy.

The Statesmen's own Denny Morrissey gives the Beatles some competition at UMass Winter Carni.

Operetta Guild's Campus Stars In . . .

THE Operetta Guild with the assistance of the Opera Workshop excelled in its colorful rendition of Meredith Wilson's The Music Man.

Jack Singer, alias "Professor" Harold Hill, portrayed the role of the swindling Pied Piper who spellbinds the folks of River City into organizing a brass band to save their youngsters from the demon Pool. Falling in love with suspicious Marion the Librarian (Peggy Jones), proved to be Hill's downfall as the professional con-man.

Jane Abbiati, as Eulalie McKechnie Shinn, the wife of River City's mayor, stopped the show with her hilarious antics. Others in the large cast sang and danced the celebrated songs which made The Music Man the smash hit at UMass that it was on Broadway.

A second production, The Boy Friend, challenged the talented UMass students to uphold the fine tradition of entertainment established by the Guild.

Roister Doisters Continue 52-Year Tradition

AFTER two years void of independent theatre work, Roister Doisters, the University's 52 year-old student dramatic group, raised the curtain on an "Evening of One Act Plays."

The plays—Edward Albee's The American Dream, Tennessee Williams' Something Unspoken, and "Pyramus and Thisbe" from Shakespeare's A Midsummer Night's Dream—were presented to the campus January 31, and February 1, just after registration for second semester.

Since Fall of 1962 Roister Doisters has been working cooperatively with the University's academic theatre, a co-curricular organization under the department of speech.

With the added experience, RD's determined to produce something on their own.

Casting was done before Christmas by director Mrs. George Forest of Northampton, and rehearsals were held intermittently up to finals. Meanwhile the production crew laid plans for sets, publicity, costuming, lighting. But the overwhelming bulk of work was done through intersession.

R.D.'s Stage Evening

WITH a shoestring the limit, much of the work to be done was revamping of old costumes and set material. Props and scenery were kept to a minimum to save time and money.

In charge of turning out the over two dozen costumes needed for the plays was junior Sandy Teguis. Most of the actual work here, as on everything else, was crammed into the few days preceding the production.

Set and costume design was handled by part-time student Kathy Wrynn, who had done masks for University Theatre's Twin Menaechni.

Lighting on the three plays was designed by Deena Ferrigno and Sheila Ferrini. Lighting ran the gamut from the modern apartment interior set in the Albee play to the pink dream-like effect required in sections of "Pyramus and Thisbe."

To help coordinate efforts, each of the plays had a student assistant director—Tom Kerrigan for the Williams' play, Pat Long for Albee, and Deena Ferrigno on Shakespeare.

of One-Act Plays

THE three plays were chosen for their variety and because they are representative of a wide range of drama by outstanding playwrights.

"Pyramus and Thisbe" is a hilarious composite of excerpts from one of the great bard's best comedies—a play within a play in which a group of illiterate peasants present ludicrous tragedy to nobility.

Something Unspoken, by one of the nation's top playwrights, is a tense dialogue between two female characters, dramatizing the incommuniability between the two.

The author of The American Dream came to critical acclaim with his Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf. His satirical one-acter is intended to typify an American family of the 1960's, a group of mechanical individuals lacking passion or depth.

Indeed, characters in the play recall the baby ("bumble" they call it) that the family once had, but dismembered when it displeased them.

Following the successful presentation, RD officers announced their plans for a similar production on the same dates next year.

Fine Arts Council Coordinates Cultural Activities

NEW on the University's calendar of events this year was a three-week Fine Arts Festival in March. Sponsoring agent was the University's Fine Arts Council.

The Council, established by the Student Senate in 1961, is an advisory committee to all fine arts activities appearing on campus and serves as liaison between the Senate and fine arts organizations.

An equally important function of the Council is the planning and coordinating of general campus fine arts programs.

Under this heading, the Council sponsored the 15 program Festival. Among the presentations was a March 17 program of fine arts dedicated to President Kennedy.

Also included was a program honoring the 400th anniversary of Shakespeare's birth, featuring noted Shakespearean scholar G. B. Harrison.

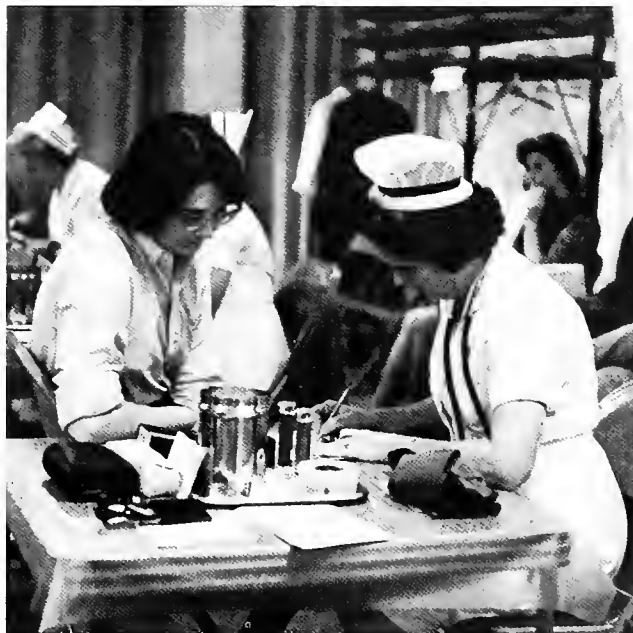

Major fine arts organizations with which the Council deals are the Bands, Art Club, and Concert Association. However, a number of other organizations as well as academic departments sponsor fine arts activities under auspices of the Council.

The 12-member committee is composed of an equal number of faculty and students, and has been chaired since its inception by Dr. John Harris of the University's Government Department.

THIS year the Campus Religious Council worked toward fulfilling its aim of promoting understanding among the religious groups on campus and serving the spiritual and physical needs of the University community. Working together for all students, members of the Newman Club, Christian Association and Hillel; representatives of the Dean of Men and the Dean of Women, and the Senate; and one of the religious chaplains met with the Council each month to discuss methods of putting these aims into practice.

Once again the UMass community responded favorably to the Religious Council's annual Blood Drive and donated over 550 pints of blood.

On the lighter side, the Council sponsored a marionette show designed to delight adults and children at the Spring Fine Arts Festival.

The Campus Religious Council Blood Drive netted over 550 pints in November.

Spacious Newman Center Facilitates Expanded Program

ACTIVELY promoting its aims of religious, intellectual, and social functions for all its members, the UMass-Newman Club came up with a stimulating program of campus wide interest.

Weekly philosophy classes, noted guest speakers, a growing library, intramural sports' teams, and assorted dances, movies, and religious events were stirred together to whet the appetites of a large segment of the student body.

A group of hard-working students with two seemingly inexhaustible advisors Father J. Joseph Quigley and Monsignor David J. Power was the driving force behind this extensive program.

After settling in spacious quarters, the Newman Club, this year, came up with a new approach to its diversified and expanding program.

Christian Association

Examines Faith In World Today

THE Christian Association, an open fellowship of Protestant students of all denominations, is dedicated to an examination of the Christian faith and to the involvement of this faith in the modern world.

To promote this type of inquiry C.A. presents guest lecturers speaking on significant issues pertaining to contemporary problems that have religious implications, and encourages enrollment in the United Christian Foundation sponsored non-credit courses. C.A.'s worship program under adviser Jere Berger includes a weekly service and Vespers at Christmas and Easter times.

Members exemplify their Christian spirit in such social action projects as slum area work camps, hospital volunteer services and tutoring programs.

Through these various activities C.A. strives to achieve its four aims of Study, Program, Service, and Worship.

Hillel Sponsors Lecture Series

B'nai Brith Hillel Foundation gives Jewish students opportunities to appropriately observe the traditional religious holidays and festivals of Channukah, Purim, Rosh Hashonah, and Yom Kippur, provides Sabbath services on Friday nights, and conducts classes in Hebrew and Yiddish, and in the basic tenets of Judaism.

Hillel also serves the campus as a whole, not only in acquainting all the students with Judaism by way of deli suppers and folk song and dance fests, but also provides chances for students to learn about the current conditions of society. This year the Hillel Foundation sponsored a series of four lectures on subjects ranging from civil liberties to the quandary of the modern Negro, thereby bringing the problems of "outside world" to the campus.

Volunteer ROTC Groups

Demonstrate Training Efficiency

WITH ten out of the last eleven AFROTC area A championships (New England and eastern New York) under their belts, this year's Flying Redmen, under the able direction of Cadet Commander Warren Vanderburg, had quite a tradition to uphold.

Famed for their precision execution of many complicated and difficult formations, the Flying Redmen represented the University at football games in the fall, the Columbus Day parade in Springfield, the Saint Patrick's Day Parade in Holyoke, the greater Amherst Community Fair, and the open house at Westover Air Force Base on Armed Forces Day. Channel 22 in Springfield has also carried their performances. Participation in the Cherry Blossom Festival in Washington, D.C. added to the team's fine record and completed an eventful year.

THE Army ROTC Special Forces unit is modeled after the famed Army Special Forces Counter-Insurgency Troops. Selected by strict physical training tests and personal interviews by Capt. John Kiliher and others these Special Forces are trained in activities similar to those of its model.

Summer and winter survival training, scuba, hand to hand combat, mountain climbing and small arms instruction head the list of programs common to counter guerilla warfare training.

Cadet Commander Dowdy, Cadet Executive Officer Blanchard and Cadet Training Officer McLaughlin direct the group. Besides their training, the Special Forces take part in many community functions such as marching in Holyoke and Springfield parades and giving exhibitions at various events like the University Centennial Exhibition.

Cocked berets, padded uniforms and uncanny smiles hide the ferociousness of our littlest guerrilla training force.

Angels Join Arnold Unit

JOHAN P. Granville Squadron of the Arnold Air Society in its second year at the University is an honorary social and service organization of selected AFROTC cadets who are responsible for numerous services to our campus and surrounding communities.

The Arnold Air Society gives briefings about the Air Force and related fields to groups such as the Boy Scouts and Civil Air Patrol Cadets. In addition the Society sponsors dinings-in at Westover Air Force Base and assists in the extracurricular activities of the AFROTC detachment.

Due to the efforts of the group, the commander Peter Gillon and the adviser Lt. Col. Roy D. Simmons the society was selected to be the new area headquarters of the 11 New England schools. This second year has seen a widening scope of service and activities culminating in a trip by three area cadets to Denver, Colorado for the national conclave of the 153 associated Arnold Air Squadrons.

Angel Flight was initiated this year under the sponsorship of the Arnold Air Society, the AFROTC fraternity.

While pledges, the Angels pulled a unique pledge prank: Secretly, they decorated the quarters of the Air Force detachment at Dickinson Hall, transforming bare, masculine rooms into a stronghold of femininity. Before initiation, the pledges attended lectures on military protocol given by the staff of the Arnold Air Society and learned basic drill forms.

Proceeds from a candy sale helped to establish a treasury to be used for future activities. With Arnold Air Society, they sang carols at Christmas and later formed a glee club. At the annual Commander's Call of Arnold Air Societies held on campus, the Angels' Sue Lydon was chosen "Little Colonel."

Foreign Students Program Expands

WITH the increasing number of foreign students on both a graduate and undergraduate level, came an increasing need of providing a warm welcome and a friendly atmosphere. By sponsoring a varied program that gives these visitors the opportunity to meet American students and to get acquainted with other foreign students, the International Club fulfills this need.

Informal coffee hours, receptions, discussions on social, cultural and educational matters are part of the regular club agenda. Once a year the organization presents a special weekend program featuring a dinner with the folk dancing and entertainment of a particular country. Their International Club Dance and the U.N. Dance are among the activities offered to the campus community.

Many of the Club's members perform an added service to the community by speaking to many local groups about their homelands and ways of life, and in doing so, help to foster world understanding and friendship.

Since 50% of its membership is composed of American students, the International Club provides a wonderful opportunity for many students to exchange information about their lives in a mutually beneficial and worthwhile way.

Commuters Strive For Campus Recognition

MORE than 900 non-resident students are making an attempt for recognition as full time campus citizens through the Non-Residents Student Association, known as the Commuters Club.

In their effort to become more of a part of the Campus community, the Commuters' Club has sponsored skating parties and dances. To bind their ties, the group has considered adopting a child overseas and warm weather splash parties.

Rebuffed by Student Union officials in a try to acquire facilities in the building, the club got the use of Farley Club House for some dances. At present commuters have squatters' rights to the Lodge, a room in the games area of the Student Union.

The non-residents have launched a new assault on the Student Union to gain an area suitable for studying, eating and relaxing. They have also placed their bid for space in the proposed addition to the student facilities planned for some years hence.

With the increase in commuter population, the constituency was awarded another seat in the Student Senate.

Exec Council Sets Course For Class

EXECUTIVE Council was established in 1961, the sophomore year of the class, to give an even, representative group the legislative reins for the class.

Thus ended the poorly attended class meeting as a means of deciding class policy and expenditures. From this group has come various other committees, including Class Gift, Class Picnic, Class Banquet and Class Night Committees.

Capt. Jack, Ex-Surfer, Once A Bostonian

With a 17-hour class load . . .

A proper Bostonian by way of Honolulu, Hawaii, came to be adviser to the Class of 1964.

Son of an army officer, Capt. John G. Keliher was born in Honolulu where his father was stationed.

But Captain Jack's Yankee lineage reaches back to the land of the bean and the cod, the elder Keliher's hometown.

For four years Captain Jack got a taste of Massachusetts when his father was adviser to the Yankee Division.

A 1956 graduate of the University of California, the six-five student played basketball there.

A paratrooper by trade, he served in the Pacific at several posts throughout the country.

He leaves in June for Ft. Campbell, Ky. where he will assume command of an airborne company, prior to an expected assignment in Viet Nam.

Mrs. Keliher Advises, Too: Kappas, Craig And Cathy

ADVISING campus groups seems to come easy to the Keliher's.

Nancy (Mrs.) Keliher has been adviser to Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority, and besides class adviser, Jack has been adviser to the Army ROTC Special Forces and Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity.

The Keliher's have two children, Craig, five and Kathy, three.

For a warm-weather Islander, the captain says he finds New England agreeable. Still, his favorite sport remains "surfin'."

While carrying a 17-hour class load as an assistant professor of military science, Capt. Keliher has pursued a master's degree in government.

His thesis concerns Communist activity in Far Eastern countries.

After completion of his military career, Capt. Keliher says he'd like to try teaching on the college level.

Mrs. Nancy Keliher, Kappa Kappa Gamma adviser, Captain Jack, Craig, five; Kathy, three.

Charles K. Smith

Clarence B. Shellnutt

Charles Smith First Adviser; Followed By C. B. Shellnutt

THREE advisers have charted the course of the Class of '64 in its four years in the University.

Originally under the tutelage of Charles K. Smith, the class passed through a regency-like status under Clarence B. Shellnutt, then on to Capt. John G. Keliher.

Smith advised the class through the sophomore year—the formative period of the class. He took leave from the University for a period of study during the '62-'63 academic year. Smith is an instructor in English.

Clarence B. Shellnutt took over from there in his position of Student Union Program Coordinator. Shellnutt helped lay the groundwork for big show of the junior class, Winter Carnival.

However, he left before the event's fruition to take a post in Boston University's student union.

Centennial Fetes Checkered Course Of University's 101st Class

CELEBRATIONS to denote the University's 100th year were in preparation when the Class of '64 first hit campus.

Massachusetts Agricultural College had come a long way from its inception by the 1862 Morrill Land Grant Act and naught was spared to commemorate its arrival to the ranks of the country's top educational echelon.

From September 1962 to June 1963 programs and events—academic and otherwise—at the University were almost universally dedicated to the Centennial banner, bearing its motto "Toward Higher Learning, More Widely Disseminated."

Dr. James T. Nicholson, Class of 1916 and General Chairman for the UM Centennial, pointed out in his address at the Opening Centennial Convocation in October, 1962, that "It is our intent to develop the Centennial in such a way as to commemorate the past, to respect the present, and, most important, to look to the future."

Revelry reached its apex at Charter Day ceremonies in late April of 1963. Dignitaries from local and national posts gathered at UMass to rever the founding of an educational institution and the institution of education.

Keynote speaker was Nobel laureate Glenn T. Seaborg, chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission. Said Seaborg, "the most important response to these challenges of education in our times is harder work."

H. Leland

An unceasing worker for closer student-faculty relations, Dr. H. Leland Varley of the department of English is recipient of the second Metawampee Award.

Varley Receives 2nd Metawampee Award

IN his 25 years with the University faculty, Dr. H. Leland Varley, professor of English, has been a constant instigator of close ties between students and teachers, and has worked unceasingly for them.

Thus, he has been chosen by a committee of seniors as recipient of the second annual Metawampee Award.

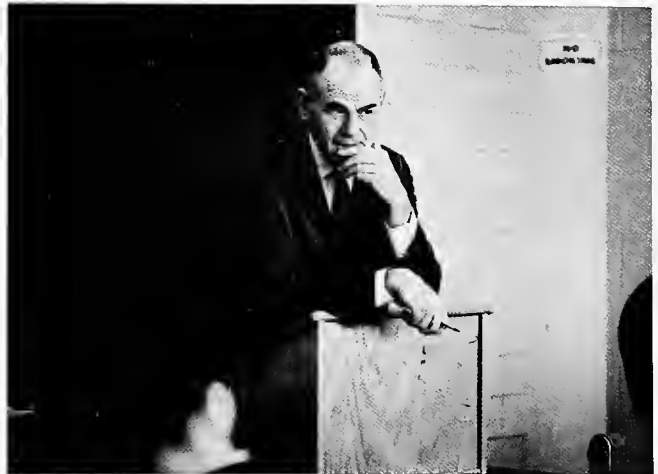

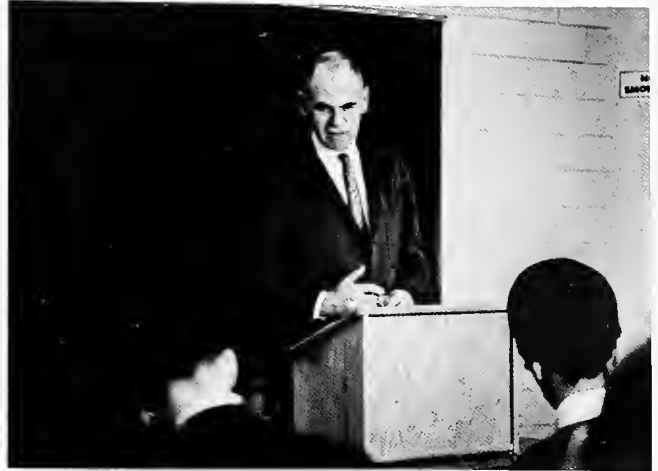

Varley was chosen to be Master of the new residential college area because of his talents in this arena.

The new student residence plan, consisting of four seven-story dormitories to open in September, 1964, is a pilot plan aimed at bringing students and faculty closer together in a rapidly expanding university.

At last fall's Student Workshop on Activities Problems (SWAP), it was Varley who proposed the "20 Cents Plan"—that students themselves initiate student-faculty ties with investment in a coffee date with their professors.

This past year, he has headed up the University's student honors program—consisting of Senior Honors Projects and Honors Colloquia.

Said President Lederle, "We are fortunate to have Professor Varley heading this pilot project. He is a scholar who has the high respect of his teaching colleagues and of the student body."

A. P. Madeira Dies; His Dedication To Students Recalled

ALBERT P. Madeira, for 12 years a member of the English department, died suddenly in late January of a heart attack after shoveling snow.

Professor Madeira was 52 years old. At the time he was adviser to the Index, Collegian and Roister Doisters. He was also coaching the University's College Bowl entry.

In 1959 the yearbook was dedicated to him. He was an honorary member of Adelpia and chairman of the alumni committee. He had received the first Metawampe Award in 1963 for his dedication as a teacher.

His was a familiar face wherever students gathered. His usual attire was a well-worn trench coat, battered felt hat over his sandburgian hair, and moccasins, a green book bag over his shoulder.

"Friends," he would say at the start of class, betraying many Summers spent in Maine and undergraduate days at Bowdoin. Then informally, he would discourse on travel, theater and playwrighting.

Perhaps the greatest tribute to Albert P. Madeira was the performance by his College Bowl charges who requested that the money be used to establish the Albert P. Madeira Scholarship Fund.

It's a fact—the Class of '64 registers and begins its career.

As Frosh, Seniors Step Into Swing Of Things

Posters shot up as the frosh became engaged in campus politics.

John Yablonski receives the tap from fellow Maroon Key at Student Leaders' Night.

FROM the first registration day, the Class of '64 was official. And within the next few weeks the class began to function as a social unit.

Elections came first, and with them an introduction to campus politics. Candidates wasted no time in preparing political posters and covering entrance ways to various buildings with them.

Soph-Frosh night was the first large scale social function to act as binding mortar for the class' variegated personality. Homecoming followed. Then Winter Carnival and rushing.

By the end of the year the class had made its mark for better or worse in the University's annals. In early Spring came recognition for outstanding classmates at the annual Student Leaders' Night.

Largest order for the class to fill came in the junior year with Winter Carnival. That Carni tied in with the University's Centennial, and the big show rose in importance.

The class, in its halcyon at the time of this writing, plunged into its last transition, to be remembered as: Last year's seniors.

First bonfire opened season against Maine.

Soph-Frosh Night

You can't know players without a scorecard. From the way the game was played, no players had scorecards.

SOPH-Frosh Night posed the first social confrontation for the Class of '64 as a class.

Callous sophomores were to face the frosh in a basketball game, provide varied entertainment and a dance. The frosh, for their part, came in force to participate. Clowning turned out to be the greatest contribution to the unintended mock hoop match.

In the end, everyone got into the act by means of free-for-all volley ball matches.

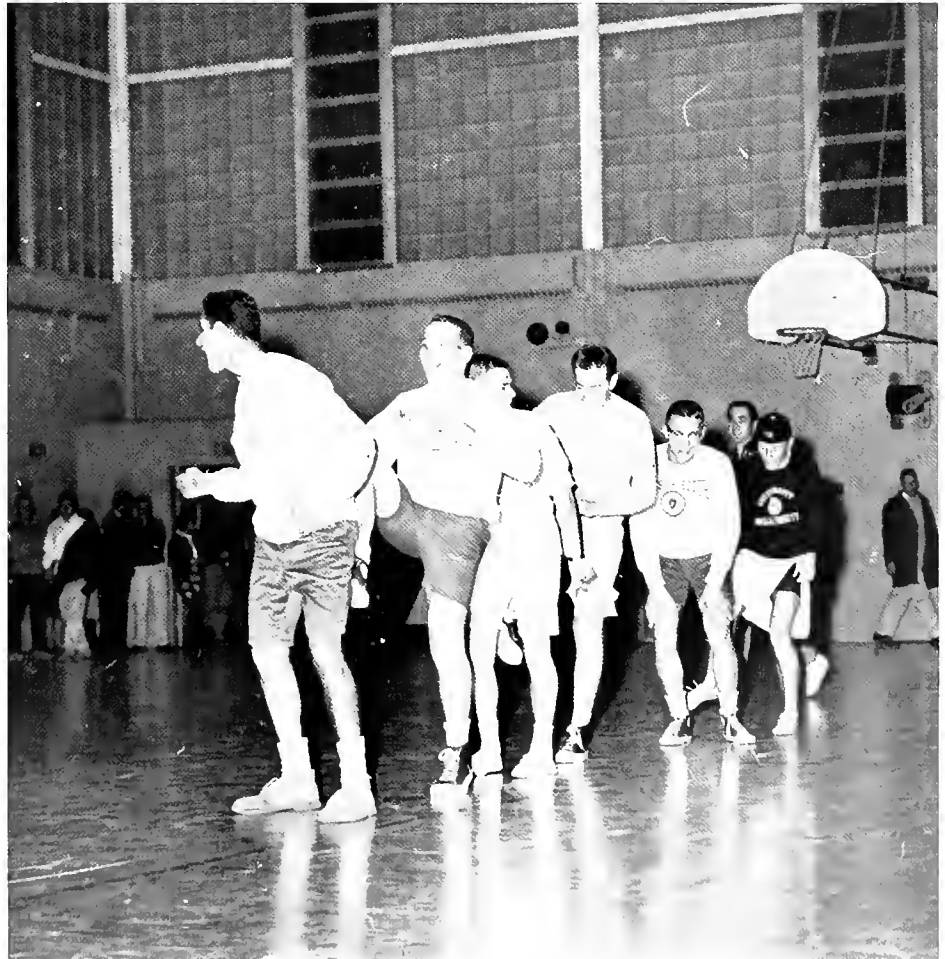

And Joan Chiminello served Cokes.

First Social Go

From Frosh Sno-Bowl To Junior Producers Of Winter Carnival

BACK in the Winter of '61, the class executed its first snow sculpture—the mammoth Sno-Bowl that provided a functional, entertaining work. That was “A Little Bit of Yesteryear.”

A couple of years later, as the junior class, the Centennial Winter Carnival was '64's brainchild. Among novelties introduced for the weekend: Log-sawing, sleigh-rides, sport parachuting and a toboggan run.

Chad Mitchell and Trio entertained at the Cage before a crowd of 3500. Attendance for the weekend was estimated at 43,000. A record at the time.

As frosh: the Sno-Bowl.

The Chad Mitchell Trio (plus two) drew 3500 to the Cage.

Fireworks heralded the opening of Carni.

Winter Carni Committee looks on in pride.

Four Years Of Change: Barely Recognizable . . .

IN four years the physiognomy of the University has changed so that to the casual visitor the place is barely recognizable.

Morrill Science Center, first opened to classes in Fall of 1960, is still adding to its structure. Huge Boyden Gymnasium, with an acre of floor space, opened in Winter of 1964.

Forestry's Holbrook Hall, the business administration building, new dining commons, agriculture buildings have gone up in four years.

Frame of the roof structure of the new Boyden Gymnasium opened in 1964.

View of east side of campus from across the pond in early Summer of 1960. To left, under construction is the main building of Morrill Science Center. Added since this picture was taken have been a wing in front of Clark Hall (center).
